Army Guard units return from Iraq

By Lt. Col. Paul Fanning

NIAGARA FALLS AIR RESERVE STATION

The hopes and prayers of thousands of Guard family members and friends from across the state came true in April as five mobilized New York Army National Guard units returned home after nearly a year of duty in Iraq.

From New York City and Rockland County, through the Capital District and Rochester and on to Buffalo – troops were flown and bussed home from Fort Dix, NJ to rousing ceremonies at local armories and at the Niagara Falls Air Reserve Station. The returned units included the 105th and 442nd Military Police Companies, the 719th Transportation Company, the 27th Support Center, Rear Area Operations and the 10th Transportation Detachment.

Red, white and blue streamers, yellow ribbons, posters and banners and cheering wives, husbands, children, parents, siblings, aunts, uncles, cousins, civilian co-workers, neighbors and friends turned out in droves to welcome their heroes home from the stress, strain and ordeals of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

The homecoming for more than 130 members of the 105th Military Police Company from Western, NY was bittersweet at the Niagara Falls Air Station on Saturday April 24. The New York Air National Guard's 107th Air Refueling Wing flew the troops back from Fort Dix, to the base, where the 107th was hosting nearly 2,000 people who had gathered to celebrate the troops return.

In a highly memorable and emotional moment, Kelly McMillin, the courageous wife of the late Sgt. Heath McMillin was the first to greet her late husband's comrades on the flight line before the crowd. As the troops descended the stairs from the 107th's KC-135 tankers, they waved to their waiting families. Each soldier then presented a carnation to Kelly and gratefully gave and received a deeply felt hug.

Virtual Help desk to be launched June 04'

On Jun. 11, the State Joint Forces Headquarters of New York will launch a virtual help desk that will be accessible through the DMNA web site (<http://www.dmna.state.ny.us/>).

The purpose of the virtual help desk is to act as a tool for answering and tracking questions and concerns that our NYARNG soldiers, family members and the like might have in regards to military affairs. The virtual help desk link will be located on the front page of the DMNA website under Member services. Utilization of this link will take the subject to the virtual help desk.

From the help desk page the subject will have three methods of asking his/her inquiry (via E-mail, written letter or telephone). Clicking on the E-mail link will generate an E-mail that will come directly to MNP-MR (CPT Pinckney) inbox.

On behalf of the Adjutant General, MNP-MR will then assign an agency within the Joint Forces HQ who is best suited to answer the inquiry. That agency will then be responsible for providing the answer to the inquiry back to MNP-MR within a specified amount of time.

AAFES adds shipping charge for some online, catalog orders

The Army & Air Force Exchange Service will update its shipping policy for internet and catalog purchases effective Jan. 20 to include a shipping charge of $4.95 on orders of $48.99 or less. There will be exceptions to this policy.

"We remain committed to offering our customers a very competitive value both online and through our catalogs," said Mike Westphal, senior vice president. "And we have designed the new shipping policy to offer a number of opportunities for our valued customers to continue receiving free shipping. The opportunities will be offered everyday and not simply as promotions. We encourage them to keep these options in mind when placing an order."

Customers who place orders using their Military Star card or include a Military Clothing Sales Store (MCSS) item in their order will always receive free shipping regardless of order amount. Orders of $49 or more incur no shipping charges unless the item is classified as oversized.

Westphal went on to say that he believes the new shipping policy "will help keep AAFES' pricing competitive while maximizing contributions to MWR programs." Last year AAFES contributed more than $200 million dollars to MWR in support of youth activities, outdoor recreation, bowling facilities and other quality of life programs on military installations worldwide.

Policy change for Army leaders identification insignia

The Army is an ever-changing entity on the Global War on Terror as seen from the leaders that we have today. By recognizing the skills, courage, and commitments in fighting in today's wars, the Army remains vigilant and defiant. To that effect, the current policy of Combat Arms leaders only wearing the leader's identification insignia, currently known as the CLI, has been changed to include leaders of the combat support and combat service support units. The following leaders are now authorized to wear the Leaders Identification Insignia: Commanders, Deputy Commanders, Platoon Leaders, Command Sergeants Major, First Sergeants, Platoon Sergeants, Section Leaders (when designated in Unit MTOE), Squad Leaders and Tank Commanders, Team Leaders, Assistant SF Detachment Commanders, SF Operational Detachment 'B' Sergeants Major, and SF Operational Detachment 'A' Senior Sergeants.

The Leaders Identification Insignia is a green cloth loop 1 5/8 inches wide. It is worn in the middle of both shoulder loops on the Army green coat, the cold weather coat (field jacket), and on the center tab of the Gore-Tex parka. When leaders wear the green tab on the parka, they should also wear their grade insignia centered on the insignia. Personnel may wear pin-on grade insignia or they may sew grade insignia onto the LI insignia, the same cloth grade insignia that is worn on the collars of the BDU's. Personnel may not wear the Leaders Identification Insignia when reassigned from a Command position or when taking an official photo. The new policy is in effect as soon as the Leaders can procure the insignia; however, it is mandatory for wear date NLT Sept. 11, 2004.

JOINT FORCE HEADQUARTERS

I would like to take a moment to congratulate the newly elected President of the Enlisted Association, Command Sgt. Maj. (R) Claude P. Imagna of the New York National Guard. As many enlisted members of the New York Army National Guard are aware, command sergeant Imagna is definitely no stranger to the Guard.

Before Imagna retired from the military, he held numerous assignments and leadership positions at all levels during his service. From March 1981 until May 1994, Imagna held the State's highest leadership position as the State Command Sergeant Major. Imagna's military career included Anti Aircraft Artilleryman, Recruiter, Maintenance Sergeant and Heavy Weapons Platoon Sergeant. As a civilian, Imagna retired as an educator from the Buffalo Board of Education where he was also very active in union activities. He was on the committee that developed the original Association bylaws. Imagna currently serves as Chairman of the National Time and Place Committee.

Imagna served as the Chairman of the 2002 Enlisted Association of the National Guard of the United States Annual Convention held in Niagara Falls and deemed the best of the 31 National Conventions held up to that time. To-date Imagna is a Charter member of the Enlisted Association.

Imagna replaces sergeant Stephanie (Mandy) Van Pelt, who completed a two-year term in April and is currently mobilized with the 42nd Rainbow Infantry Division awaiting deployment.

The Command Sergeant Major eagerly looks forward to representing the 15,000 enlisted members of the New York Air and Army National Guard as the Association seeks to maintain the benefits our Enlisted Forces now enjoy. He also will seek to insure that we are remembered as a force at war when Federal and State Legislatures discuss additional benefits as many of our members are asked to make sacrifices unparalleled since WWII. When asked what his biggest concern was he stated "membership within the organization."

"There is strength in numbers," he added, and he wants to make this the largest organization in the Northeast.

The command sergeant and his wife, Jeannette, reside in Tonawanda. He was quick to say that he could not consider taking on the position without Jeannette's support and will work tirelessly on behalf of the men and woman of the New York National Guard.

THE SOUNDS OF WAR

By Col. Russell Zelman Battalion Surgeon
Task Force 2-108th
Infantry Forward Operating Base O'Ryan

I was writing about the sounds of war in Iraq. The sounds vary from the dreaded fires from enemy mortars and rockets to the songbirds that awaken me each morning. Such contrasts, contrasts that are frequent in such a harsh land. The sounds vary according to the time of day. By early AM we hear the constant drone of 35 generators throughout the Forward Observation Base (FOB). They are constant sounds from diesel engines some of which are large 6 cylinder Volvo's turning the RPM's loud and into the heat. Others are on trailers that we brought all the way from New York. The sounds of Hummers are frequent and continuous as they kick up the dust in clouds. The 5-ton trucks, Bradleys and tanks all have their own signature. They are the big ones the ones that take over the kingdom of sounds. They are reassuring noises. Then there are the noises of the helicopters, constant and comfortable for me, the Black hawks, Apaches and the Kiowa. They are welcome noises and are recurrent. Their sounds begin just 10 km from our FOB and as we are in their flight path, good sounds, familiar sounds. A new comer in the sound world has become more and more frequent, the sound of fighter jets, and the F-16 has found a new home at Anaconda or Ballad Airport. These sounds especially with the afterburners open are reassuring incredible noises reminding us of our might and superiority in the world. Oh the night sounds, the quiet of a FOB trying to blend into the desert. The infrequent traveling noises in the dark. The Hummers on patrol protecting the FOB with their drivers clad with Night vision devices round and round they go, watching for enemy or suspicious movement. These are good sounds. The jackals, the running dogs and the quiet noises of the wild hogs. No birds at night, an occasional owl with its silent flight. Off in the distance one can often hear the traffic afar on what is called the MSR or main highway that goes from Kuwait through Baghdad and into northern Iraq. This is our MSR, the one we protect and secure from terrorists. We often hear the trucks that bring supplies to Anaconda, our supply center and home for 20K troops and civilians. Oh the sounds of war. All of this is offset by machine gun fire, small arms fire and as occasional blast from who knows where. Daily we explode large stockpiles of Sadams bombs in what is called a controlled blast. This is accomplished by specialists in the Army called EOD. They have been setting off explosions daily up to three a day since we arrived. These sounds are unique as they shake the ground and everything for miles. Oh the sounds of war. Thank God we rarely hear the screams of the injured or sick. Those are the worst. Those are the sounds of war that hurt. I have witnessed several families of Sunni and Shia mourn their dead, those are horrible sounds of war. I guess the best sounds are yet to come. The sounds of an end to all of this, the sounds of our return. That is the sound of war that we all are focused upon, the sounds of our families. The sounds of war...

Friends and Comrades:

As Memorial Day approaches I'm reminded of the day in which we honor those who made the ultimate sacrifice. It is a day of reflection, and a day of mourning, but it also a day of celebration.

A day when we reflect on lives cut short, often young lives, on the battlefields of history. Who knows how many future Presidents, Nobel Prize winners, scientists discovering cures for cancer, literary giants, artistic masters we lost in battle. Was it worth it?

Even to be able to have that thought proves that it was. What President wouldn't stand for freedom? What Nobel Prize winner hasn't made the world a little bit better place to live. What Doctor wouldn't fight to save lives? What literary great doesn't hope to inspire. What artist wouldn't hope their art didn't cause us to reflect. Those who have given their lives have done all of that, and so much more.

We mourn their loss. I often think of the Movie "The Fighting Sullivan's" when I think of the magnitude of that loss. When the Chaplain pulls up in front of the Sullivan's house to inform them of the deaths of their five Sons on the USS Juneau, Mrs. Sullivan knows what he is there for. She knows that one of her sons is dead. She draws on some inner strength and opens the door. She looks the Chaplain straight in the eye and asks a simple question. "Which one?" He replies, "All five." All five, lost in a single battle. Can you imagine the loss, the grief, and the gut wrenching emotion in those two words? Just saying it makes me well with emotion and grief for a family I never knew.

Today we add the name of one of our own to that list of those we mourn. Pfc. Nathan Brown. He will never marry, have children, or even play with his grandchildren. Who knows what he could have done or might have become. Why him? We could dwell on the whys and what if's forever. They would not change the hard and true facts. He died in battle. In a war on terrorism, and a war against terrorists who hate Americans and everything America stands for.

Terrorists hated Nathan Brown because he was an American, because hate is their way. In war, people die, good people, good soldiers, good Americans. In Nathan's memory, let hate not be our way nor division our method.

Today we should also celebrate. Celebrate the gift given each of us as Americans. The gift of life, of hope, of dreams, in a free and democratic society. The gift of liberty and freedom.

We stand here at Forward Operating Base O'Ryan, fighting a war, a war on terrorism, a war against those who hate freedom and democracy. If we can give freedom a foothold, give democracy a chance here, we will protect it at home. We still face difficult times ahead. Hard work, separation from loved ones, sweat and maybe blood. But, no matter how hard it gets, no matter what, no sacrifice is greater, no gift more precious than that given us by those who gave their last full measure.

NY's First Infantryman, Third Army Guard Soldier lost in OIF

By Staff Sgt. Steve Petibone
Guard Times Staff

SAMARRA, IRAQ

A pleasant Easter weekend turned to tragedy for the family of a young infantry soldier when they learned that their son had become the third New York Army National Guard Soldier Killed In Action in Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Private First Class Nathan Brown, age 21, a member of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 108th Infantry Regiment was killed on April 11th when his unit was ambushed by a large insurgent force near the town of Sammara, Iraq. A rocket-propelled grenade (RPG) had struck the 5-ton truck he was riding in. Four other members of the unit were injured in the attack. Members of the unit later reported they defeated the enemy force in full.

The devastating news struck his family, and the families of the other deployed members of the company like a hammer blow. He was a popular young man, known for his vitality and friendliness.

Nathan was the oldest of four children of Ricky and Kathy Brown from the Town of Moreau in South Glens Falls. Brown enlisted in the Guard in March 2002 after earning his General Educational Development degree (GED) the previous June. Before being called up with his unit last fall, Brown held a number of jobs in the community. He had worked for the Sagamore Resort in Bolton Landing, Thomas's House Painting Company and the local grocery store. He was engaged and had talked about going to college.

The news media quickly learned of the tragedy and flocked to the armory. In honor of their son, the Brown family chose to grant interviews and speak openly about their Soldier even as the official Department of Defense news release was being distributed. Relatives and friends followed in suit.

Press interviews were filled with tearful tributes. There were a few young members of his unit in Glens Falls awaiting separate deployment orders when the tragic news had come. Now they took turns holding an overnight vigil by the sign bearing his name in front of the armory. Expressions of pride and sorrow poured from relatives, friends and the community.

"He was a very up-tempo, energetic person who made those around him feel better," said Pfc. Jason Parks, a member of the unit's rear detachment. "I am honored to have served with him and to have known him on a personal basis," he added, reflecting the common sentiments of many.

Brown had joined the unit along with other friends from the community and a strong bond existed among the members. One newspaper headline described the situation as the "Band of Brothers has lost one of its own."

"It was more like a family thing rather than men going off to war," observed Tom Ryan, Nathan's uncle, commenting on his nephew's determination to serve and the close friends who had deployed with him.

"Nathan Brown became much more than an enlistment, he became part of our family," said Sgt. 1st Class Arthur Coon, Brown's recruiter. Nathan's mother had brought her son to Sgt. Coon to join the Guard. Like so many other parents, Kathy knew and believed that military service would help him focus and prepare for the future. Nathan loved the Guard and his unit. It was only natural for Kathy and Rick Brown to request Sgt. Coon deliver the eulogy at the funeral service.

From the moment his casket arrived at the Albany International Airport to his final resting place at the Gerald B.H. Solomon Saratoga National Cemetery, Nathan Brown received full military honors and extensive media coverage. The family requested that the media be given as much access as possible to film their son's return, the memorial service and the graveside honors.

Residents of the Greater Capital District and Glens Falls region saw for themselves in detail the ceremonial honors executed by members of the 27th Infantry Brigade and the New York

National Guard Military Honors team. And, the community responded with gestures of heart felt respect and sorrow.

They saw his casket arrive at the airport and the emotional scene on the tarmac with family and friends as a military detail placed the flag over the casket and carried it to the hearse. A motorcycle group comprised of veterans escorted the funeral motorcade.

The New York State Police temporarily shut down the northbound access ramp to Interstate 87 to allow the motorcade to pass and served as the official escort. Along the route north, local firefighters had raised a 20-by-30 foot American flag on a ladder truck at the overpass as the procession passed underneath.

At the halfway mark, three additional New York State troopers parked their cruisers in formation and rendered a salute. In Glens Falls, scores of people of all ages lined the streets holding small American flags and yellow ribbons as the motorcade went by.

The procession paused at the home of Nathan's grandmother, so that from her driveway and in her wheel chair she could place her hand on her grandson's casket as it was held by the honors detail.

The public saw the arrival at the funeral home and the posting of the guard during the viewing the night before the funeral. The next day, the route to the church was lined with flags, ribbons, veterans and youth groups. In every possible sense, he was extended a hero's welcome home.

Hundreds attended the funeral at Saint Alphonsus Church in Glens Falls. New York's Lieutenant Governor Mary Donohue, the Adjutant General, Maj. Gen. Thomas P. Maguire, Jr., and retired New York State Adjutant General, Maj. Gen. Lawrence P. Flynn were among the dignitaries who came. It was standing room only. Relatives, friends, civilian officials, veterans, the public and military members had all gathered to reflect on the young Guardsman, whose life was cut short by the war abroad.

"The last time I saw Nathan he was handing me his backpack," said Sgt. Coon as he related to the assembly his fondest memory of his young recruit. "His original had gotten damaged and he was issued a new one. On a previous visit home from Fort Drum, I was admiring his new equipment, including the backpacks. As the Soldiers arrived at the armory for the final goodbye, Nathan approached me and said he wanted me to have something, and handed me the backpack. At the time, it seemed like such a simple gesture from a Soldier, especially when you realize that he gave me the new one and he kept the damaged one. Now, for me, the backpack is far more than a piece of equipment. The back pack represents Nathan to me — a giving person, someone who thinks of others and is an unselfish and compassionate..."

At the cemetery, there was a firing party, taps and a "missing man" flyover by Guard Blackhawk helicopters. His parents were presented with his military awards: The Purple Heart Medal, The Bronze Star Medal, the Combat Infantryman's Badge and the New York State Medal for Valor. At the very last, Maj. Gen. Maguire presented the folded American Flag to Kathy.

"The 27th Infantry Brigade has a long history of deploying to war zones and that history is full of young heroes of Nathan's caliber," said Coon in the closing of his eulogy. "The 27th Brigade's shoulder patch is comprised of the brightest stars of the Orion star constellation and if you see it in the Southern sky you will find the brightest star there looking down on us saying, I am gone, but I am not forgotten."

COMBAT SUPPORT CENTER SCANIA, IRAQ

Part III in a continuing series on the deployment of the 105th MP Company

As the holiday season of 2003 was bringing winter weather and seasonal charm to New York, the Soldiers and family members of the 105th Military Police Company were finding it difficult to celebrate.

The troops had been in there for almost eight months and the one-year anniversary of the federal call up was within sight. Two members of the company had been lost to combat action and there was no indication of a return date for the troops to look forward to.

Fortunately, the unit had been moved from desolate Camp Kalsu to the safety and much improved conditions of a Soldier support base dubbed Combat Support Center Scania. It is a large logistical base built astride the Main Supply Route.

Here there were actual buildings with air conditioning, mess facilities, recreational services and a gym for working out. It is an Army "oasis" in the middle of a war zone.

Cooler temperatures in Iraq had done little to diminish the threat from insurgent forces. In fact, there was genuine concern that the enemy would take advantage of upcoming Islamic holidays to increase their attacks. Soldiers and family members were confronted with the reality of family separation at the worst possible time of year.

And yet, though separated, the Soldiers and the families found the way not just to cope, but also to try and overcome it all.

Pro-Active Families

Even before Thanksgiving, the family readiness group had planned and organized a series of events to help its members, their Soldiers and especially the children who would be without a parent during what has long been considered a child's favorite holiday.

At the unit's home at the Masten Avenue Army in Buffalo, the group had been using the "Brock Room," a wonderful, museum-like room that was set up and maintained by the veterans. The walls are covered with old photos and relics, and tables and chairs are arranged banquet-style for meetings and dinners.

Retired Guardsman Don Barnes maintains the room for the 106th Veterans Association and the group came to depend upon him to have the room available for a variety of special events. In addition, he maintained a bulletin board of photos, articles, cards and letters about the 105th MP Company and its family readiness group for all to see. The Brock Room had become the group's "club room" and the welcome mat was out.

There were the regular meetings and the gift-packing days. But for Barnes the most memorable event was the day that holiday video messages from the children were recorded. They were to be sent over to the troops.

While none were anxious to go back to Iraq, they all knew that their comrades were awaiting their return so they too, could take time off. For the Soldiers and so many were willing to be around so spouses and others realized how important that was for us," she said.

"Toys R Us" in Buffalo sponsored special holiday shopping events exclusively for military families featuring heavily discounted prices. Local businesses organized and ran a holiday food drive to benefit military families in need. A video and photo company offered military members free sessions and video taping could be shipped to their in Iraq. And, there were efforts to reach out to the families.

Though separated by – a distance of half the apparent that the residential Buffalo region wanted the that they were behind of them; and, in their own the war, too.

Nearing the End

As the holidays passed, additional Guard units were activated and one unit from the NY Army National Guard was identified as a replacement in theater for the 105th MP Company. Across the state, family members of deployed units looked forward to good news that their Soldiers would soon come home. Soldiers and family members anxiously awaited news that a date would be set. It wouldn't be that simple.

The national shortage of available military police units prompted the Army to activate and deploy Guard field artillery units and press them through condensed military police training. Two batteries of NY's 258th Field Artillery Battalion were so activated. To meet mobilization requirements, additional Soldiers from other Buffalo-area units were called up to deploy with them.

In nearly every case, the training program for these artillery units proved to be too short in duration. The units needed additional training time. In addition, in order to rotate units in and other units out of the theater, US Central Command would embark in the largest rotation of US troops since the Vietnam War. The logistical challenges would be huge. For the Soldiers in theater and their awaiting families the stage was set for an excruciating period of waiting, deep concern and possibly for disappointment.

In the Next Issue... The Path Home for the Valiant 105th their family members, that "second" departure was far more difficult than the first.

Community Support

Across the state, veterans and community groups reached out to offer support to local units and military families as the holiday season approached. These sentiments from the community would continue to build and extend throughout the period. The support being offered in Western NY, and in Buffalo in particular, exceeded all others.

Phyllis Murawski, the lead volunteer of the family readiness group and Dara Fowler, the commander's wife were quick to acknowledge the especially sensitive and appreciated support rendered to the group from local chapters of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Vietnam Veterans of America.

"The veterans did so much and so many things for us," said Phyllis. "I think one of the most welcomed things was that thousands of miles world away – it was dents of the Greater Soldiers to know them; were thinking way, trying to fight

FORTDRUM

Now that New York Army and Air National Guard units have reached historical deployment levels, individual combat units are realizing that their traditional roles as tank crews, artillerymen and infantrymen have expanded to include combat arms and tactical skills.

The 1st Battalion, 127th Armor utilized four days of their annual training (AT) this year to stage some Common Task Training (CTT)-style operations at Fort Drum's Military Operations on Urban Terrain (MOUT) site. Normally, previous AT's concentrated on tank crews getting their tanks prepared for tank lanes training, which was also conducted this year.

"You never know what you'll be doing or where you'll be doing it," stated Lt. Col. David Zysk, battalion commander, 1st Battalion, 127th Armor. "It never hurts to provide the best training you can."

These have been words to live by as the 127th was activated for Operation Noble Eagle for security and stability operations at West Point, Fort Drum, N.Y., the Letterkenny Army Depot, Pa., the War College, Carlisle, Pa. and the Picatinny Arsenal, N.J.

Lt. Col. Zysk added that the unit was exposed to a garrison environment during Operation Noble Eagle and that combat training is practical. The 127th is currently not being deployed, however, more than 100 Soldiers were transferred to the 42nd Infantry Division for deployment in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Each of the five lanes combined aspects of CTT and other tasks from the Security Operations and Support Operations (SOSO) handbook, according to Lt. Col. Zysk.

The first lane consisted of tank convoy escort scenarios that required Soldiers to react to air attacks, refugee's on the battlefield, rocket-propelled grenade (RPG) ambush attacks, and enemy tank ambush attacks. The second lane dealt with media and civilian relations in an urban setting. Situations included looting, mediating conflicts, establishing relationships with the media and controlling the movement of civilians. The third lane focused on urban operations in a warehouse and/or industrial part of a village serving as a primary supply point for mines and explosives. Soldiers trained to conduct search and seizure, react to unexploded ordinance, conduct an urban patrol, react to a sniper attack and assist casualties. The fourth lane tasked the medics and engineers. Soldiers conducted patrols through a village and discover they have moved into a minefield, which produced casualties. They performed first aid on the casualties and extract themselves from the minefield. The fifth lane concentrated on military checkpoint operations. Situations that could occur at and around a military checkpoint such as smuggling weapons and contraband were tested. Tasks consisted of establishing and operating an observation post, conducting a vehicle search, and reacting to unexploded ordinance.

To accent the MOUT site-training scenario, the 127th incorporated the services of several members of the 105th Military Police (MP) Company recently returned from Operation Iraqi Freedom. Additional support came from the 152nd Engineers and 342nd Forward Support Battalion, both on AT status, to assist with maintenance, medical and refueling.

Transitioning the tank crews from their turrets to the art of clearing a room was met with mixed reactions. "At first, the training was a little uncomfortable because I was not used to carrying all the gear on my back," said Sgt. James Solomon, tank mechanic, 1st Battalion, 127th Armor, "but this type of training offers a realistic change of pace for the unit."

"Today, we need to be more than tankers," said Spc. Adam Anderson, 105mm main gunner, A Company, 127th Armor. "This is different than our usual training, but we need to always be ready and that's the reason we train."

Aerial port flight provides global mobility in war on terror

By Master Sgt. Andrew Gates
455th Expeditionary Operations Group Public Affairs

BAGRAM AIR BASE, AFGHANISTAN

Every day, between 50 and 100 tons of equipment and supplies come into Bagram, flown in by a constant stream of cargo aircraft at all hours of the day. Since this is a combat environment, getting the aircraft down, unloaded quickly and off the ground again is extremely important. Keeping that logistical pipeline running smoothly and efficiently falls to the men and women of the Air Terminal Operations Center, or ATOC, here.

"We do all the aircraft load planning, passenger terminal operations, logistics, loading and unloading that happens at a regular airport – except at a much higher pace," said Master Sgt. Janet Coomes, 455th Expeditionary Logistics Readiness Squadron. Sergeant Coomes was activated from the 67th Aerial Port Squadron, a Reserve unit from Hill AFB, Utah.

In fact, the entire ATOC is made up of members of the Guard and Reserves – all 28 team members. Six of them come from Sergeant Coomes' outfit; two more Reservists are from the 69th Aerial Port Squadron, in Maryland. The remaining members of the team are from the 109th Aerial Port Flight, a New York Air National Guard unit from Stratton Air National Guard Base.

This total force effort is invaluable to keeping Bagram supplied. The ATOC operates seven days a week, 24 hours a day. "I don't think we have had a day when we didn't have aircraft in," said Master Sgt. Mark Mann, 455th ELRS, who is here from the 109th APF in New York. The high operations tempo sometimes requires the team to perform an engine-running off-load – a challenging maneuver where the airplane parks, keeps the engine running while the logisticians remove the cargo and upload any new cargo. This speeds up the process and minimizes time an aircraft spends on the ground, said Sergeant Coomes.

Besides cargo, the logisticians also move more than 9,000 passengers in and out of the Bagram area each month. Although the people can "self-load" onto an aircraft, "cargo doesn't talk back," joked Sergeant Mann.

With the amount of traffic on the flight line, the large numbers of inbound and outgoing aircraft and large numbers of passengers moving into and out of the area, safety is extremely important on the flight line. "We have to make sure we adhere to all Air Force loading instructions – we can't load people on an aircraft carrying ammunition, for instance, or with a pallet of hazardous material," said Sergeant Coomes.

109th Airlift Wing Personnel Flight receives top honors

By Staff Sgt. Mike R. Smith

STRATTON AIR NATIONAL GUARD BASE

The 109th Airlift Wing Military Personnel Flight (MPF) achieved the 2003 Gerrit D. Foster Jr. Outstanding Military Personnel Flight Award from the Air National Guard and signed by Lt. Gen. Daniel James on Mar. 23.

The personnel flight here was one of eight ANG units nationwide to receive the award. The award, named in honor of the late Colonel Foster, a former field activities division chief with the then-named Air Force Military Personnel Center, recognizes the top ten-percent of personnel flights that give outstanding service or make significant contributions to the Air Force.

"Our MPF and recruiting and retention sections have been working at elevated levels since September 2001, but 2003 was a year of significant achievement," said Lt. Col. Thomas Mason, Director of Personnel. He explained that some of the more outstanding achievements for MPF in 2003 included serving a 101-percent increase in ID-card customers due to a Navy site deactivation, presenting a premier Commander/First Sergeants' Workshop, processing record numbers of mobilization/demobilization actions – such as DD214s – and in the words of the AMC IG inspectors, "they superbly screened deploying personnel" for the initial response operational readiness inspection held here last summer.

"We strive to maintain excellence in service to our customers and provide world-class support to the deployed missions of the Wing," said the colonel.

MPF here is charged with managing all life-cycle personnel actions, from initial recruitment to formal training, through sustainment such as assignments, promotions, awards, appraisals and retention programs and reenlistments to relocations, such as transfers and retirements. In addition, MPF also provides deploying personnel readiness processing and personnel support for contingency operations, which support Polar, Aerospace Expeditionary Force, and contingency deployed operations.

Safety is also a major concern during nighttime operations, because much of the activity must be done in the dark. "There have been some nights when you can't see your hand in front of your face," said Sergeant Mann. "We have a lot of briefings on safety practices, and we make sure that all the teams stay in constant communication.

Both Sergeant Coomes and Sergeant Mann have a lot of pride in what they are currently doing and how they are impacting the on-going operations against terrorists in Afghanistan. "This is a big change from the stereotypical one weekend a month and two weeks a year," Sergeant Mann said. "This isn't the typical 9 to 5 job – we have all kinds of great challenges."

"This is also a great opportunity to get out and see new locations," agreed Sergeant Coomes. "I get a great deal of satisfaction knowing that I am helping another country become safer and give the people the opportunity to enjoy a number of those freedoms we have in the United States."

The Wing set all new records for total missions accomplished, total cargo hauled and most missions ever to the South Pole. The Wing moved over 600,000 gallons of fuel to the South Pole and over 12 million pounds of cargo, fuel and passengers over the Antarctic continent. "Day in and day out the 109th fought the elements, deep snow, cold temperatures, blinding storms and, if that isn't much, hazardous situations to get the job done," said Col. Verle L. Johnston Jr., Wing Vice Commander. "We also accomplished a record setting polar mission this year in support of Operation Deep Freeze." (Photo by Master Sgt. Willie Gizara, 109th AW)

Air Guard Jujitsu Club starts classes, invites new members

By Staff Sgt. Mike R. Smith
109AW Public Affairs

STRATTON AIR NATIONAL GUARD BASE

Guardmembers now have means to self-defense and physical fitness since the Stratton Jujitsu Club began classes at the B-dining hall early this year.

The club, which meets every Monday and Wednesday at 5:30 p.m., is open to all guardmembers, families and friends of good character.

According to the Club's informational brochure Modern Jujitsu is based on natural body motions and natural reactions; meaning, the techniques involved will not take years of practice. In fact, classes do not require prior attendance, and members can join anytime, at any skill level and not feel left behind. Those interested should call 344-2480 for more details.

"I enjoy the workouts because every night you learn something different," said Senior Master Sgt. William Pryor, club participant. He added that the instruction is informal, leaving "rank at the door." Instruction is also ongoing, so you can start anytime and not need to catch up to the rest of the group, he said.

John Borter, a certified instructor of self-defense and martial arts to the general public, law enforcement, security and military personnel, instructs members. He has six black belts in the Martial Arts and is a Martial Arts Hall of Fame inductee.

"The decision to train in the martial arts enhances every area of your life," said Borter.

"From a Guardsman's perspective, it's designed as part of the overall fitness program," said CE Commander and club participant, Lt. Col. Richard Edwards. The Colonel explained that the club is an accumulation of six years of interest and effort—the original members met at the Saratoga YMCA and sought permission to move the club on base. Once approved, Moral, Welfare and Recreation (MWR) supplied the club with new practice mats. Uniforms were ordered, brochures were sent out and colorful patches were sewn up to identify the club and recruit up to thirty new members. So far, ten new members have joined.

The plan is to grow the membership and promote physical fitness through base participation, said the Colonel.

Practices start with warm-up exercises, stretching, rolling and breakfalls. The instructor then leads the group through a multitude of fighting and self defense techniques such as rolls, falls, finger and wrist locks, arm bars, strikes, kicks and escapes. Other techniques, which fall within Modern Jujitsu's White to Black belt ranking system, include finger, wrist and arm locks, head, neck and leg techniques, throws and takedowns, pressure points, ground fighting and weapon defenses. The goal for students is to work hard to prepare for the rank evaluation tests, which are scheduled approximately every three months.

"The Bottom line is, it's fun," said Master Sgt. Craig Talarico, club participant.

Again, those interested should call 344-2480 for more details.

Naval Militia 'Fleet' sets sail to guard NY

NY Naval Militia

Members of the New York State Naval Militia are operating a fleet of small boats in NY waters including one 40-foot, three 28-foot and two 22-foot vessels to support the militia's new NYS Emergency Boat Service (NYSMEBS), which augments law enforcement and civilian security personnel at bridges, tunnels, train stations, subways and other sites to deter terrorists, respond to attacks and help victims as part of Operation Empire Shield.

Since their introduction, NYSMEBS' small boats have moved over 29,850 boat crew and NY Army National Guard personnel, making over 12,257 trips covering over 18,152 miles (excluding security zone patrols). NYSMEBS participates in marine search and rescue missions, assisting vessels grounded or in distress and is assigned to other homeland security assignments. In addition to their military mission, NYSMEBS also provides safe navigation and protection of the environment within NY.

NEWBURGH

Take 1,250 pounds of brawn, spread it across five football players who bench press an average of 400 pounds each, then corral them into a 23 million dollar flight simulator for about three hours. The result of that mix: harsh takeoffs, even rougher landings, poor aerial refueling procedures and plenty of laughs from the powerhouse leviathans huddled inside.

For the handful of star players and staff from the Orange County Bulldogs, a Hudson Valley semipro football team, who had an opportunity on March 30, 2004 to tour the 105th Airlift Wing's C-5 flight simulator, quickly learned that using finesse rather than their big biceps and brute force was what it would take to tackle the "Galaxy."

"I knew our military had technological stuff, but I didn't know it was as advanced as that simulator," said Co-President Frank Williams after the tour. "With equipment like that and with the people we have serving in the armed forces; I now understand why we have the best military in the world. It was a great experience and we had fun," he said.

This year marks twelve years of football in the Orange County area for the Bulldogs. The team's record is 70 wins, 12 losses and one tie. Having won several minor league titles, earning them the right to be called the 1996 and 1997 Northern Division Champions as well as the 1997 Big Apple Bowl Champions, the Bulldogs climbed even higher on the semipro totem pole in 2002 when they won the Empire Football League Championship.

"In 1997, our first season as part of the Garden State Football League, we went undefeated at 9-0 and were nationally ranked third in the East by Minor League News. Then in 2000 we finished the season at 10-2 and ranked 14th nationally among all semipro teams in the country. I think we're making excellent progress as a team and with a little luck we'll have better seasons and more championships to come," said Paul Williams Jr., also Co-President of the Orange County Bulldogs.

According to their mission statement, as an organization the team is focused on achieving and maintaining a winning tradition, committed to excellence and leadership, and seeks to provide opportunities for personal development through participation in athletic competition. Defensive Tackle, Dave Smart added, "We're much like the military because we believe in similar things, such as teamwork and fitness. Having said that I appreciate what the military does and what they stand for. I don't know anyone who thinks differently."

He added, "The sad thing is most people don't realize what the military does on a daily basis because they simply don't see it in action, in person everyday. I know one thing though, when we pulled up to the front gate in our van and guys with guns stopped to check our credentials, all of us knew our visit was for real."

So, beyond the front gate and onto their tour, how did the band of colossal football players accustomed to arduous practices and punishing games, which often yield cuts, bruises, sprains and strains, think they would do against their unknown foe, the C-5 flight simulator?

"It looks like an alien spacecraft. Not that I've ever seen one before," said Defensive End, Michael Boykin, who first thought flying the simulator would be easy. His assumption changed a few engine fires and rainstorms later, when he had a chance to sit in the copilots seat adjacent to Maj. Steve Grant from the 137th Airlift Squadron.

"Honestly, it was tougher to fly than I thought. But it did move around like a spaceship," he said while laughing. "It was a great experience; I never knew technology like this existed in Newburgh. I always thought they kept stuff like this locked up with the aliens."

After 320 pound Offensive End, Joe Zoffoli had his turn in the hot seat, having been tossed a little fog and wind while trying to land the simulator at LaGuardia Airport; he too had a change of heart. "I didn't expect it to fly like a plane. I really thought it would be simple. I was wrong. It wasn't like playing Top Gun on X-Box," he said.

Deceived by the seemingly innocent looking flight simulator was Ron Alindogan, Offensive Center for the Bulldogs, who said the simulator was a contraption that bared a stark resemblance to what in his mind was a gigantic meat locker on hydraulic stilts. "OK, when I first looked at the thing I thought, 'Where's Gilligan and the Skipper for my three hour tour?' I was wrong; it wasn't a big freezer with a bunch of hoses sticking out the sides. It was a really hard to fly freezer with hoses sticking out the sides," he said.

All shattered misconceptions aside, when the tour was over and it was time to head home for the night, to rest up for another day of push-ups and pull ups of course, everyone said they had a great time flying the simulator, even if it was a bit "boxy" looking like they all thought.

"It was a real experience, we just need to learn a little more grace when it comes to flying aircraft," Frank Williams said. "It was also nice to have an opportunity to say thanks to our men and women in uniform for all they've done and for all they've sacrificed. We're lucky to have a few star players on our team, but the military is even luckier to have individuals willing to give up everything for this country. You're all heroes."

*NOTE: As a token of their appreciation to the men and women of the 105th Airlift Wing for their participation in "Operation Iraqi Freedom," the Orange County Bulldogs dedicated an autographed football and a championship T-shirt to the unit. Both are on display outside of the 105th Dining Facility. SAN ANTONIO, TX

Senior Airman Erin Holzapfel, a member of the 105th Medical Group was recently selected to join the Air Force "Tops in Blue" entertainment group as a female vocalist. Her tour with "Tops in Blue" is a year long, during which time she will travel the world. The "Tops in Blue" entertainment group started in 1953, and since then over 1,700 airmen have performed in more than 7,000 shows since the program's inception.

The Air Force "Tops in Blue" entertainment group is an active duty unit made up of amateur performers who have outstanding entertainment abilities. The 30-member group travels throughout the continental United States, Central America, Alaska, Canada and Europe, entertaining more than 250,000 military personnel and their families every year.

"My friends are a little jealous that I'll be traveling the world," Holzapfel said. "But I tell them 'Sure, I'll get to visit about 27 countries, but you don't see all the hard work that goes with it.' Sometimes you need to work extremely long days," she said.

Senior Airman Holzapfel's journey to Air Force stardom began when Master Sgt. Mike Antinucci, 105th Retention Office Manager, handed her an application the day before an audition tape was due. Although Holzapfel is in the Air National Guard, her current military status made her eligible for the program.

"I knew about 'Tops in Blue' because Antinucci has been telling me about it since I joined the military. I just never knew how to apply. Then, he gave me an application and I went searching through my tapes at home," Holzapfel said.

Hundreds of hopeful candidates submit applications for a possible audition with "Tops In Blue," but only 70 are chosen to attend a 10-day audition conference. Holzapfel's gambit paid off, as she was one of those 70 individuals chosen to light up the stage at San Antonio, TX, during auditions.

According to Holzapfel, tryouts consisted of dance, voice and instrument auditions. She performed Sarah McLachlin's "Angel" for the crowd. "I had several people approach me, to say they never liked that song before they heard me sing it. That was a pretty good feeling," she said.

Although Holzapfel has been singing since the age of 10, candidates for "Tops in Blue" also had to compete on another level—they needed to undergo a grueling personal interview whereby everything from an individual's motivation for auditioning to their composure under pressure would be questioned and evaluated. Holzapfel attested, the judges even pushed back interview times and dates, and turned the most innocent answers around on candidates to test their ability to handle stress.

"During my interview the judges asked me to do an impression of a hot dog when they found out that I was from New York. So, I stretched and made myself look really still, but they kept throwing things in like, 'Okay, now you're being cooked.' So, I started wiggling around. 'Now someone's putting mustard on you,' they said. So, I got up and pretended to put mustard on myself. It was a lot of fun," Holzapfel said.

After returning from her audition, all the while being "glued to her cell phone" waiting to find out if she made the final cut, the good news finally came. Her father, Master Sgt. Rob Dana, Recruiting Office supervisor for the 105th Airlift Wing added, "At first I didn't even know she submitted an application. But once I found out she did apply and was accepted for an audition, I really wasn't surprised. When Erin does something extraordinary, I'm never surprised because she always excels at what she does. I very proud of her," Dana said.

Holzapfel's next step is to travel back to San Antonio, where she and her new teammates will learn to break down and set up their stage equipment, attend professional make-up lessons, and learn the dance, instrument and song aspects of their new show routines before they begin their tour.

152nd Airlift Operations Group Judge Advocate receives award

By 2nd Lt. Anthony L. Bucci Wing
Public Affairs Officer

HANCOCK AIR NATIONAL GUARD BASE

Lt. Col. Brian J. Lauri, 152nd Air Operations Group's Judge Advocate, received the New York State Colonel Gouverneur Morris Citizen/Soldier Award for outstanding contributions to the state's organized militia during a May 1st ceremony at Hancock Field Air National Guard Base. Presenting the award to Lt. Col. Lauri was Major General Thomas P. Maguire, Jr., Adjutant General for the State of New York. The award was in recognition for his outstanding record of dedicated community service and exemplary professional military judge advocate skills. "I was very surprised and even more honored at receiving this award," Lt. Col. Lauri said after the award ceremony.

He has actively supported various community organizations, while juggling his military, civilian, and family responsibilities. He has and continues to be extremely involved in a diverse assortment of volunteer organizations throughout Central New York. Some of those groups that he works with are the New York State Prosecutor's Training Institute, Onondaga County Public Schools, Columbia College of Missouri – Hancock Field Extension, Knights of Columbus; Food Bank of Central New York, Friends of Life, Anna's Food Pantry, Girl Scouts of America, Boy Scouts of America, Morality in the Media, American Heart Association, and Crop Walk. Serving in these assorted organizations is extremely impressive, but only part of the reason he won the coveted New York State Colonel Gouverneur Morris Citizen/Soldier Award.

Lauri's resume within the Air National Guard as a legal officer is impressive, and he continues to distinguish himself an exceptional lawyer, leader and military officer. Lt. Col. Gordon Howard, Vice Commander of the 152nd AOG said; "He is a great officer, incredibly supportive of the community, a wonderful family man, and a valued member of this unit." He voluntarily deployed for homeland support for Operation Noble Eagle in 2002. In 2003 he was handpicked by the National Guard Bureau to support a Combined Joint Special Operations Task Force in which he was the lone Air National Guard member in the entire Combined Task Force. "Working with Special Forces was very much like working with the Air National Guard. They are very talented, professional, and focused on the mission." Lt. Col. Lauri said. This Special Operation saw engagements in active combat throughout Jordan and Iraq.

He returned to his civilian life and his family, but his thoughts turn to those within the Special Operations Task force he accompanied as they prepare to redeploy overseas. "It is one of the most unique experiences in my military career." He added that this experience changed his life, giving him a greater appreciation for those men and women who serve within the Special Forces. As I spoke to him about this experience he continued to be very modest and humble, even downplaying his significant role in this mission. "Lt. Col. Lauri has been one of the finest citizen soldiers in the air National Guard. His involvement in the community, his church, his family and his total dedication to the defense of our country made him an outstanding choice for the Citizen Soldier of the Year Award. He volunteered to work with the Army's Special Forces in Iraq and was the only Air National Guard JAG assigned in Iraq during Operation Iraqi Freedom," said Col. Joseph Bulmer, Jr., 152nd AOG Commander.

42nd Infantry Division readies for Iraq

42ND INFANTRY DIVISION

Soldiers of the 42nd Infantry Division are on the move. Over the past 30 days, the citizen-soldiers of the Army's famous "Rainbow Division" departed home station armories across the United States for movement and in-processing at their Fort Drum, NY, Fort Dix, NJ, Fort Hood and Fort Bliss, TX and Camp Shelby, MS mobilization sites.

In the past month, more than 3,000 division Soldiers mobilized in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom and the nation's Global War on Terror. Assisted by the training support members of the Army's 78th Division, Rainbow Soldiers began their individual training preparations as a first step towards validation and deployment. All divisional troops will undergo evaluation by their Army unit trainers in a number of individual Soldier combat skills as well as team or collective training tasks.

"We'll get this mission done as a team," said Maj. Gen. Joseph J. Taluto, the 42nd Infantry Division Commander, "it's just that simple." The division expects to complete its training tasks later this year and deploy to Iraq at the end of 2004 and early 2005. The mobilization of the Rainbow Division provides a foundation on which the Army can build a combat task force for operations in Iraq. It is a reflection of the Army's transformation towards division-level command and control "units of employment" and combat brigade "units of action" in which different organizations can be assembled to form a combat force.

Division Soldiers will provide the command and control, logistics and operational base for maneuver brigades to succeed in their mission to establish a safe and secure environment in Iraq. While the maneuver brigades have yet to be announced by the Department of the Army, they may reflect any combination of Army, Army National Guard, or multinational forces.

The entire process is part of the Army's design for employing smaller, modular units for mobilization and deployment. The concept provides "plug and play," capabilities-based forces, capable of seamlessly integrating with other Army formations in joint and combined operations.

"This division headquarters has some significant experience in standing up an operational task force," said the division Chief of Staff, Col. Mark Heffner. "Hundreds of our Rainbow Soldiers deployed for state active duty in New York City following the terror attacks of September 11th, 2001. Command of the Army National Guard, Air National Guard and Naval Militia forces for the State of New York was in the hands of the 42nd Division Headquarters," he said. The 42nd Infantry Task Force represents National Guard members from more than twelve states. Rainbow Division Soldiers mobilized from their home states of New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Delaware, Vermont, Rhode Island and Florida.

The Rainbow Team welcomes troops from Kentucky, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri and Pennsylvania. These National Guard units arrived to fill in some specialty combat service support functions.

Rainbow Division units mobilizing for Operation Iraqi Freedom consist of the 42nd Infantry Division Headquarters, the Aviation and Engineer Brigade Headquarters, the Division Artillery Headquarters, the Division Support Command Headquarters, the 1st Battalion, 150th General Aviation Support Battalion, the 50th Main Support Battalion, the 642nd Division Aviation Support Battalion, the 250th Signal Battalion, the 642nd Military Intelligence Battalion, the 42nd Military Police Company, the 272nd Chemical Company, 42nd Division Band, Battery E (Target Acquisition), 101st Field Artillery, the 42nd Rear Operations Cell and the 173rd Long Range Surveillance Detachment. Additionally, Soldiers from the 1st Battalion, 69th Infantry Regiment mobilized as a supplement to the Louisiana National Guard's 256th Separate Brigade.

Additionally, the division expects to receive a variety of Active Army and Army Reserve combat, combat support and combat service support elements to complete the division base organization. Those forces will conduct their own pre-deployment training and join the task force overseas.

One of the most significant differences for Soldiers now serving on active duty is the issue of new individual and organization equipment. Members of the 42nd Infantry Division began to receive new equipment items such as Interceptor Body Armor and the Modular Sleeping Bag System.

Under the Army's Rapid Fielding Initiative, other items of issue for Soldiers will include the Advanced Combat Helmet and the Improved Hot Weather Desert Boot. These items will be provided to Soldiers as they receive their Desert Combat Uniforms, or DCUs. The Army budgeted more than $400 Million this fiscal year towards equipping Soldiers for missions overseas.

More importantly, the unit supply system is full of replacement or new issue items. Weapons systems such as the M240 Machine Gun, the M249 Squad Automatic Weapon, M16A2 rifles and their associated support equipment continue to flow into arms rooms at Fort Drum and Fort Dix for Soldiers to train, fire and qualify.

On a larger scale, units will continue to receive new vehicles, radios and other items necessary for the success of the mission overseas. For many division Soldiers, these items will require familiarization training or refresher training over the course of the summer.

The 42nd Infantry Division training program during post-mobilization blends all the portions of individual, crew, team and collective training. Rainbow Soldiers will complete validation training in their basic Soldier skills, crew and team training in tasks such as convoy operations, and collective training in command and control operations for the combat task force.

"Each and every Soldier, when they arrive in Kuwait," Maj. Gen. Taluto instructed his commanders and staff, "will be motivated, confident and rested; they will be ready for our mission."

Team-building exercises will be conducted throughout the summer as Soldiers conduct more challenging training events, culminating with the division's mission readiness exercise in the fall.

Soldier training includes such items as identification and response to improvised explosive devices, or IEDs, convoy live-fire exercises, defensive fire exercises, communications training and other tactical skills necessary for operations with the Multinational Corps - Iraq. Commanders and their staffs will conduct a series of command post exercises. These are designed to challenge leaders' abilities to gather information, plan and execute mission orders, and stress the command and control systems of the units.

"This is your training plan," said Lt. Gen. Joseph R. Inge, the First U.S. Army Commander to the group of division leaders before mobilization. "I will ensure that you get everything you need to train and that every Soldier who gets on that plane for Iraq is ready for his job, but the training plan to get there is yours to develop," Inge told the Rainbow leadership. A Mission Not Without Sacrifice.

While thousands of 42nd Infantry Soldiers continue to train and prepare for the mission in Iraq, hundreds of Rainbow Division Soldiers are already serving overseas for Iraqi Freedom 2.

Soldiers from the Division Artillery's 1st Battalion, 258th Field Artillery from New York and the 3rd Battalion, 112th Field Artillery in New Jersey are currently in Iraq providing security force missions in central Iraq with Task Force Baghdad.

Sadly, four Rainbow Division comrades were killed in action in the early part of June. Killed on June 4th were Sgt. Frank Carvill, 51, of Carlstadt, NJ and Spc. Christopher Duffy, 26, of Brick, NJ. The following day, June 5th saw the loss of Sgt. Humberto Timoteo, 25, of Newark and Spc. Ryan Doltz, 26 of Mine Hill, NJ.

The loss of a single Soldier is a tragic and devastating event. The thoughts and prayers of the entire division go out to the Soldiers, families and communities of the 112th Field Artillery.

More than 50 people, including Soldiers, family, and friends hugged and said goodbye as the 101st Cavalry prepared to mobilize in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom. Members of the 101st will leave their heavy armor behind as they join the 69th Infantry Division, "The Fighting 69th." Although a little reluctant to part with their big guns, the unit exuded confidence and esprit de corps at the ceremony.

We will backfill the 69th, augmenting as infantry, doing whatever needed...

"Why walk when you can ride," Pfc. Mark Gorman asked, expressing a common sentiment. Still, members said that they are prepared to work alongside seasoned infantry. "I'm ready to get going and get training. I'm going to do my job."

"We'll probably be playing in the sand," Spc. James Montesano said of upcoming desert training. "But we've been working hard. We've been meeting for weeks, not just for drills. We'd meet a week here, a week there, putting ourselves through a miniature mobilization, just trying to get ourselves as ready as we could. This way we're better prepared once we get to the mobilization site."

"We will backfill the 69th, augmenting as infantry, doing whatever they need," Sgt. Timothy O'Brien said. We won't be driving tanks. I'm a little anxious. Getting ready is easy, saying goodbye isn't. Privacy is something I'll miss, because we'll be doing everything together."

And they'll be doing it well, making use of a wide array of skills and experience.

"We have a lot of experience, we have retired policemen, carpenters, plumbers, guys who've spent time in the active Army, we have a good mix, and I think it will work well," 1st Lt. Stephen Kitchen, HHC XO 1st/69th said. "I think we'll be all right. My main concern is to see to it that these guys come home safely. All my thoughts and plans are about bringing these guys home safely."

"We're doing this for our family," Spc. David Santana said. His family, including his brother-in-law, niece, nephew, mother, dad, sister, and wife, came to see him off. Sgt. Andrew Dickson was having the same tough time leaving his family. His parents came to see him off. "We're very proud of our guys," his mother, Elaine, said.

"The only thing is there's no way to prepare for leaving your family," Spc. Montesano said. "You get butterflies a lot worse than you did for basic." Montesano also had to close his hot-rod shop prior to departure, but he plans to reopen it upon his return.

Kathy Warden, Joan Plant, and Lisa Dethomasis of Family Readiness all worked hard to make things a little easier for everyone.

"We set a 'Tree of Concern,' so there will be contact with all of the families," Plant said. "We will have meetings and try to make sure that everyone's ready, family-wise." The group brought food, drinks, played music, and set up tables and chairs for families to use. The reception was set up on the drill floor. In the background, boxes wrapped in plastic sat on pallets.

Away from their families, Soldiers of the 101st said they would rely on each other, and they expressed faith in each other.

"These guys are great, they're absolutely great," Spc. Montesano said. "I couldn't ask to go with a better group of guys."

"We have a lot of camaraderie," Sgt. Dickson said. "If I had to choose to go with anyone, it would be with these guys." "I've been with the unit three wonderful years," Spc. Santana said. "These guys are excellent."

PEEKSKILL

Troops of the 133rd Maintenance Company, New York Army National Guard held a deployment ceremony before leaving for Ft. Lewis, Washington in support of Operation Enduring Freedom. The ceremony took place Mar. 1 at the Peekskill Armory on an unseasonably warm day.

Capt. Stephen Lynch, commander of the 133rd, assured families that the soldiers would be fine. The unit is tasked with evaluating and repairing equipment used in Iraq and Afghanistan. The 133rd will be mobilized for a period of one year.

"We're going to take really good care of them," Lynch said. "Rest assured they will be fine. Since we are going to Fort Lewis, Washington, the risks are not as great."

This is not the first time the 133rd has been called to duty. The 133rd deployed to Bosnia in 1996 for nine months and won accolades from Army commanders.

"Equipment that no one has been able to fix, we'll be able to fix it," Lynch said. "The unit will inspect equipment and make sure it is fully serviceable before going overseas for use in Operation Enduring Freedom."

The 133rd will also inspect equipment returning from overseas and repair it if necessary. "I envision us being the best maintenance unit out there," Lynch said.

Family members, senior officers and senior NCO's were on hand for the event, which included promotions, speeches, and last-minute briefings on family readiness issues. Col. Michael Swezey, Commander of the 53 Troop Command, spoke before the family members, thanking them for their sacrifice. "These soldiers will be supporting the Global War on Terror. If you look to the south, there are two buildings missing. That's why we are doing this today."

Sgt. Maj. Charles Steele, the State Family Program Coordinator, attended the ceremony and briefed soldiers and families on family readiness issues and the American Red Cross.

Senior officers and NCOs stressed their gratefulness to the soldiers and families and urged them to ready themselves and seek help or ask questions if they have any issues.

"I feel lucky that we get this opportunity to defend this country," Lynch said. "We're ready to tackle this mission and make New York State proud of us."

HORSEHEADS

It could have been a family reunion. The laughter of small children playing filled the air. Friends and relatives hugged and shook hands. A few people shed quiet tears, but beneath the mirth and fellowship was a mood that was more somber and subdued.

That's because the people who gathered Monday at the New York State Armory in Horseheads were saying goodbye to about 80 local National Guard soldiers who will soon leave loved ones behind to take part in Operation Enduring Freedom in Afghanistan.

"This will be the longest he's ever been gone," Penny Peters of Savona said of her husband Carl, a Corning Inc. employee who's also a member of Company B, 204th Engineer Battalion. "We're a little disappointed because our daughter is getting married. That makes it a little tough on him. He has two grandsons too. They don't quite understand. They're five. They just know that grandpa is going away."

The soldiers and their families gathered at the armory Monday for the farewell ceremony that also included local elected officials and National Guard officers. In all, about 150 members of Company B, also known as Bravo Company, from Horseheads, Binghamton and Peekskill, will mobilize to take part in operations in Afghanistan. Two other New York Army National Guard companies were activated last week to support Operation Iraqi Freedom.

The troops from Bravo Company will ship out to Fort Polk, La., for additional training before heading to the Middle East for a deployment that could last up to 18 months. "We are a good mix of people. We've got a broad range of experience," said company Commander Capt. Jonathan Dilmore, who is leaving his own family behind for his first overseas deployment. "We have people with civilian skills who also have military jobs. We have a large, diverse range of skills to draw from."

Among the soldiers who will put their talents to work helping to rebuild Afghanistan is Staff Sgt. Robert L. Ayers of Dryden. Ayers, a heating, ventilation and air-conditioning technician in civilian life, has worked in Germany and other countries, but this will be his first long-term deployment. National Guard Cpl. Todd Hughes of Avoca, a maintenance supervisor at Lakeview Apartments in Bath, will put his plumbing skills to use when he arrives in Afghanistan. Hughes will have to say goodbye to his parents, his wife, Tawyna, and two young children. But he's also looking forward to his new assignment.

"It will be hard being away from the family for a while, but I'm ready to go do my duty. I'm excited," said Hughes, 29. "The hardest part will be Christmas and holidays. But I can't wait. I volunteered before they made it mandatory. I want to go and do it."

BUFFALO

Clad in desert-brown camouflage, the soldiers looked like a sandstorm as they rushed into the waiting arms of their loved ones. It was the 427th Forward Support Battalion and the 105th Military Police Company,

New York Army National Guard, coming home from the Middle East and Operation Iraqi Freedom.

It's been a long road—literally. Since last spring, they've been moving up and down Iraq's highways, weathering the desert, enemy fire, and separation from their families to perform their respective missions—securing supply convoys and delivering supplies.

"It's very hard work," said Capt. Michael Fowler, 105th Military Police Company commander. "It's very long days, long nights, and it's been a long, long year."

"It feels absolutely great to be back on American soil," said Sgt. Todd Howard, A Company, 427th Forward Support Battalion. "We don't have to worry about anything anymore."

The two units were welcomed home in separate ceremonies in April. The homecoming celebration for the 427th was held at the Weidner Road Armory and Aviation Support Facility Complex in Rochester, and the homecoming ceremony for 105th Military Police Company was held at the Niagara Falls Air Base. Both units were greeted with cheers, American flags and home made signs.

Duty, stateside or abroad, is nothing new to the 105th Military Police Company. The unit deployed to Bosnia in 1999 and New York City in response to 9-11. The unit counts among its members veterans of the first Gulf War. Fowler said the unit was heavily involved in a lot of the combat occupations immediately south of Baghdad during Operation Iraqi Freedom.

"We had several missions," Fowler said. "just south of Baghdad, securing convoys of humanitarian supplies, soldiers, military equipment—everything that moved in and out of Baghdad. We had to secure other soldiers as they were resting on their travels through Iraq. We also had to do combat operations and night patrols to search for the anti-coalition forces and prevent them from attacking United States Soldiers."

Spc. Jesus Vega, A Company, 427th Forward Support Battalion, (center), reunited with his fiancée Aurora Bonilla (right) and his niece Ginaia Phillips. (left)

The 105th Military Police Company is returning as one of the most accomplished units in the theatre, Fowler added. These accomplishments include more than sixty combat engagements. In addition to responding to military and civilian traffic accidents, confiscating hundreds of illegal weapons, locating weapons and munitions caches, the 105th Military Police Company ensured the safe passage of over 400,000 Coalition vehicles through their area of responsibility.

"We had strong opposition," said Sgt. Michael Maciejewski, 105th Military Police Company. "We had enemy contact everyday...constant attacks trying to break down our progression."

"Trying to get convoys in and out without getting attacked was a very difficult thing for us," said Andolina. She said teamwork was key to the unit's success.

"We just stuck together. We're just like a family and I'm going to miss everybody," Andolina said she continually looked to the unit's Desert Storm veterans, who she said, taught her determination and situational awareness.

"They were there to guide us through everything," she said. The unit also coordinated the repair of a large irrigation pumping station, the repair of three local schools and two local medical clinics, established the first Iraqi Highway Patrol Station in the country, and participated in combined operations with Special Forces and Multi-National units.

"We have a lot of accomplishments that we're very proud of," Fowler said. "They did not come without a lot of struggle and hard work, but we're finally at the point where we can celebrate and be thankful to be home." Or sacrifice. Fowler also spoke about the loss of unit members Spc. Michael Williams, 46, of Buffalo, and Sgt. Heath McMillin, 29, of Clifton Springs, New York. Both soldiers were killed in action last year.

"There's a lot of heavy hearts," Fowler said. "The soldiers we lost, Heath McMillin and Michael Williams, will always be with us. We're so happy to be home, but we remember that there are two of our brothers who aren't coming home with us. We think about their families. We will remember them forever."

"I feel very sad that we lost Heath McMillin and Mike Williams," said Spc. Pedro Quinones. "Heath McMillin was my team leader, and I'll never forget him. I wish he could've been here today, because he always told me he was going to bring me home." Soldiers still in Iraq are also a source of concern, Fowler said.

"We're also worried about the soldiers who are still over there," he said. "They have a job to do, and they have to continue on where we left off. We know how difficult it is, first hand. But we're going to pray for them, we're going to wish them the best, and hope they can enjoy the same homecoming we did as soon as possible."

Delivering supplies on the roads of Iraq and Kuwait were the soldiers of the New York Army National Guard's 719th Transportation Company and 427th Forward Support Battalion. About 40 members of the 427th Forward Support Battalion were mobilized and merged with the 719th Transportation Company for the deployment.

Spc. Timothy Marciniak, A Company, 427th Forward Support Battalion, said the two units quickly overcame their differences. "It was hard at first, but we all came together," he said.

The transport soldiers were tasked with delivering supplies along the main supply route which runs northwest from Kuwait into the heart of Iraq. Marciniak said they were part of the lifeline, and dubbed themselves the 'Harlem Express' because the 719th Transportation Company is based in Harlem, New York.

Marciniak described the missions as a 16-hour, 300 to 400-mile-a-day tasks.

"Some people did a 1000 [miles] a day," he said. "Most everything [in Iraq] gets transported by truck," said Spc. Jesus Vega, A Company, 427th Forward Support Battalion. "Our job was important."

A native of Puerto Rico, Vega said Iraq and Kuwait were hotter than any place he had ever been. He described the sand in the region as fine and powdery. "It gets in your eyes and ears...it's very bad," Vega said. "With the heat and

HARLEM

One of New York's first units be activated in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom redeployed to a throng of cheering families, friends, local community leaders and Metro media anxiously awaiting on the steps of the armory in April.

Nearly 90 Soldiers dressed in Desert Camouflage Uniforms (DCU's) returned from Fort Dix, N.J. after completing demobilization requirements. In order to fulfill their mission requirements, approximately 50 Soldiers from the 427th Support Battalion from Rochester, Syracuse and other upstate locations were also deployed as members of the 719th.

sweat, it's not a good mix." The truckers also had to contend with traffic jams and the threat of attack. Vega said he adjusted to the threat level.

"You always had doubt in your mind, but for me, it became routine," he said. Sgt. Todd Howard said the roads in Kuwait and Iraq are just like the roads of Rochester—except for the threat of attack. The traffic jams occur in the cities, he said, where modern vehicles use roads "made for a donkey and a cart."

Howard estimated the unit was shot at as often as once a month. He recalled once driving through the desert at night as part of a two-vehicle convoy. As they approached a fuel point, they were waved on because shots had been fired nearby. The convoy headed to another camp about eight miles up the road.

"It gets your heart racing, and your adrenaline pumping," Howard said.

"All your training kicks in." Running beside the road was berm. Howard said the berm was about 300 meters off, and that whoever had fired at the fuel point might be hiding behind it, waiting to fire at them. He said everyone was so focused that "you could hear a pin drop over the noise of the engine." Suddenly they saw shadows up ahead, which they took to be enemy combatants. Though the shadows turned out to be a herd of camels, Howard said, the thrill of possible combat stayed with him for a while.

"When it's happening, you don't think about your wife and kid," Howard said. "You think about the guy beside you, and what you have to do." A 719th Soldier embraces his wife.

Quinones said he didn't regret going to Iraq. "It's our duty to over [Iraq]. Every soldier wants to go over there and see what our training is all about." He said it was good to be home. "I feel relieved, and glad, sad, happy, all at the same time," he said. "I'm just glad we can finally get on with our lives."

chapter in the history of the 369th as well as the new Army," continued Capt. Price. "We've done things out there that we've never done before that wasn't part of our Military Occupational Skills (MOS), but we rose to the challenge and aced everyone of those events."

SCHENECTADY

105th Military Police (MP) Soldiers from Schenectady and Buffalo returned to their home stations after 14 months of active duty, which included a year in Iraq.

After landing at Stratton Air National Guard base in Scotia, a contingent of about 20 Capital District Soldiers rolled into the Schenectady armory escorted by seven local police vehicles. Jubilant family members encircled the unit holding flags, placards and ribbons. Local media was on hand.

"It's very touching," said Staff Sgt. Mark McCracken, 105th MP Company, "it's nice to see the people that remembered us while we were gone and that they cared enough to come out and see us."

Meanwhile, another contingent of more than 120 Military Police Soldiers were landing at the 107th Air Refueling Reserve Station, Niagara Falls via three KC-135 air refueling tanker airplanes. More happy family members, community leaders and media were also on hand to embrace and congratulate their returning Soldiers.

"This makes me feel great to see the strong family support that I know our families had," said Sgt. Michael Maciejewski.

"We knew all of the time, the strong support we had."

Marksmanship team excels at All Army Marksmanship Championships

The New York Army National Guard Combat Shooting Team showcased their marksmanship skills at the 2004 All Army Small Arms Championships at Fort Benning, Georgia, March 13-21, 2004. The last time the All-Army Championships were held was in 1994. This year marks a return of the event after a ten-year hiatus. Teams from the Active Army, Army Reserve, and National Guard were represented at the event. Competitors were challenged in combat style shooting in both rifle and pistol events at distances from 15 – 25 yards in pistol and 200 – 500 yards in rifle.

The New York National Guard Rifle Team finished first place in the All Army Matches, with Pennsylvania and the Texas National Guard in second and third place respectively. The New York Combat Rifle Team just recently finished second place at the 2003 Winston P. Wilson National Guard Championships held at Camp Robinson, Arkansas last October. The Pistol Team finished third place team at All Army with Texas and Pennsylvania in first and second place respectively.

The team was composed of: 1st Lt. Rodney Richmond (Combat Rifle Team Captain), Sgt. 1st Class David Evans, Sgt. 1st Class Steve Gould, Staff Sgt. Randy Knowlton, Spc. Steve Woodruff, Capt. Daniel Dudziak, Combat Pistol Team Captain, Sgt. 1st Class Derrick Banning, and Staff Sgt. Louis Mancuso.

Excellence in Competition (EIC) matches, were held in rifle and pistol categories at All Army. The "Distinguished Marksman" award is given to shooters who compete in EIC matches and finish in the top ten percent of competitors. Shooters must accumulate 30 points to become distinguished. The New York State Combat Team has only one member who is double distinguished (both rifle and pistol) Sgt. Joe Dee, three shooters who are rifle distinguished; Staff Sgt. Frank Petricone, Woodruff, and Richmond; and one shooter who is pistol distinguished; Dudziak. Four of the New York competitors won distinguished points at the All Army Matches. In the Rifle EIC match, Dudziak and Knowlton; and in pistol Mancuso and Banning finished on the top ten percent earning them distinguished points.

At the individual level, Woodruff finished second place in the Secretary of the Army (SECARMY) Combat Rifle Match, 6th in the U.S. Army Service Rifle Individual Championship, 7th in the Chief of Staff of the Army, Combat Rifle Match, and 7th in Combined Small Arms Day 1. Mancuso finished 8th in the Combat Pistol Excellence-in-Competition Match, and 10th in the Chief of Staff of the Army, Combat Pistol Match. Dudziak finished 4th in Chief of Staff of the Army, Combat Pistol Match, 7th in U.S. Army Service Pistol Championship, 8th in Combined Small Arms Day 2, and 9th in Combined Small Arms Overall Champion. Banning finished 9th in Combined Small Arms Day 2. Richmond finished 7th in the All Army Rifle Excellence-in-Competition Match.

MILITARY FUNERAL HONORS

$ Need extra money $

Each month over 500 deceased veterans receive honors from the New York Army National Guard. This is our way of saying thank you for their honorable service. Our teams play Taps, fold, and present the flag to the next of kin. We also perform firing party duties. Dress Blue uniforms are provided for qualified soldiers.

If you are a soldier who takes pride in the military, your appearance, has a Class A Uniform, can be available some weekdays and Saturdays, and want to earn some extra money plus retirement points, you could be right for this program.

We are also looking for soldiers to work part-time, Monday thru Saturday, in our new Capital District office. For more information call Mr. Don Roy, at (518) 786-4906.

Perseverance pays off for Brooklyn Marine

Story by Cpl. Mike Escobar
Marine Corp Public Affairs, Camp LeJune, N.C.

CAMP CINTRON, HAITI

A stocky, broad-shouldered Marine walks down the hall of Combined Joint Task Force (CJTF), Haiti headquarters, making his way to the linguists' office. "Great! Just another day in my beloved Marine Corps," the 40-year-old Brooklyn, N.Y. native replies with a smile.

Such is a day in the life of Marine Chief Warrant Officer 3 Jean Poitevien, a linguist with CJTF-Haiti. On April 27, Brig. Gen. Ron Coleman, the CJTF commander, promoted Poitevien to his present rank.

From humble beginnings in a "rough neighborhood in Brooklyn," to his present duties at Camp Cintron, Poitevien said his career as a reservist in the Marine Corps has helped him succeed both in and out of the military.

"The Marine Corps gave me the discipline and the focus that I needed to succeed," he stated.

Poitevien began his career as an enlisted infantryman with Fox Company 2/25, a Brooklyn-based reserve unit. When Fox Company relocated to upstate New York, he cross-trained into the communications field because a communication reserve unit was only ten minutes away from home, he said.

At his new unit, he worked as a digital switch technician with the 6th Communications Battalion, where he repaired switches on telephone systems. Marine Col. Mario LaPaix, CJTF-Haiti special advisor to the commanding general and head of the linguist section, said he has known Poitevien for years. LaPaix stated that Poitevien's dedication and work ethic manifest themselves in various ways. Poitevien's successful career is more a reflection of his love for the Marine Corps than of his personal ambition.

"I've always been impressed with him," LaPaix stated. "He's a take charge kind of guy, and he's not afraid of responsibility." Marine Gunnery Sgt. Jean Joseph, a CJTF-Haiti linguist and one of Poitevien's coworkers is also impressed with his work ethic. "He's focused and adds some order in the office," Joseph stated. "He's a very reliable person... you can definitely count on him."

LaPaix specifically requested that Poitevien deploy with him to Haiti. Despite the fact that the chief warrant officer had just married, he willingly deployed the day after, LaPaix said.

"That dedication to the Corps is unheard of. A guy that can pack up his stuff right after he gets married has great work habits. But this Brooklyn native is passionate about other things in his life as well. "I like to run... but that was something I developed over time," Poitevien said. He also said he likes to read fiction novels, but one of the most important things in his life is his family. "I definitely consider myself a family man," he stated, his thoughtful brown eyes staring into the distance. "I'd like to be able to spend more time with my kids."

The chief warrant officer stated that he also enjoys life in the civilian world, and attributes his success as a central office manager with Verizon to the experience the Corps gave him in the communications field. "I couldn't have done the things I've done (without Marine Corps schooling)," he continued. Poitevien has met many Marines who share the same interest, and the networking has been invaluable. The Marines he's met may have been just as influenced by him as he was by them, Joseph said. "He motivates Marines to better serve the Corps and help accomplish the mission." Poitevien has been a driving force in motivating Joseph to apply for warrant officer school.

"The entire time I've known him, I've never known him to shirk any responsibilities," LaPaix stated. "He's a great worker, conscientious person, and a great leader."

New York Guard Chiropractors partner Soldiers with 21st Century practices

Florida Chiropractor, Dr. Alan M. Creed, one of the leading authorities on instrument adjusting in the Chiropractic profession lead a seminar on Tuesday, Mar. 30 for chiropractors of the Chiropractic Services Unit (CSU) of the 244th Medical Clinic of the New York Guard (NYG). Dr. Creed, a US Army veteran and a Past Commander of a Veterans Post, donated his lecture to the NYG as an act of appreciation for the service the State Guard Chiropractor's rendered to both State and Federal forces during the 9-11 operations; the CSU had administered over 200 Chiropractic treatments on a daily basis.

Dr. Creed was welcomed to Camp Smith by Lt. Col. Patrick Delamere, DC, the NYG Chief of Chiropractic Services and Maj. Floyd Miller, DC, Deputy Chief. Opening remarks were lead by Lt. Col. Delamere and Maj. Miller, honoring the attendance of Dr. Creed.

Dr. Creed commended the Chiropractor's of the New York State Guard, stating that they were the first fully commissioned chiropractor's within any military organization to lead chiropractic practices and the military into the 21st Century.

The CSU Chiropractors was enthusiastic and overwhelming. New knowledge introduced in this seminar will be beneficial to both my private patients and the soldiers of New York State, said Capt. David Hecht, DC. Capt. Richard Zipperman, DC stated that, "by utilizing a multi-technique approach, the soldiers will experience more rapid relief from pain along with improved function." Other area chiropractor's who attended the seminar included Capt. Evan Delman, DC, Capt. Charles Marino, DC, and Capt. Barry Pinchefskey, DC.

Col. Richard H. Bard, MD, Commander of the 244th Medical Clinic stated that Dr. Creed will be invited to attend this annual seminar.

HICKSVILLE

On Saturday, Apr. 3, members of Long Island's 14th Brigade, New York Guard, including other military and civilian volunteers, boxed school and basic medical supplies for shipment to Iraq in support of "Operation Iraqi School." Once received in Iraq, Soldiers from the 1st Cavalry Division will distribute these supplies to schools and orphanages throughout Iraq.

U.S. Army Maj. Gregg Softy conceived of the project last year while serving in Baghdad with the 1st Cavalry Division. Maj. Doug Proietto of the U.S. Army Reserve also envisioned a similar effort to support an orphanage in Baghdad run by Mother Theresa's Sisters of Charity, while serving in Iraq with the 800th MP Brigade. Both Softy and Proietto separately contacted Capt. Raymond Mascolo of the New York Guard for assistance with fund raising and "Operation Iraqi School" emerged.

Capt. Mascolo, who was assisted by Lt. Brian Cepelak of the U.S. Naval Reserves, coordinated the operation and helped collect more than $5,000 in donations. Mascolo observed, "I was proud to assist our soldiers who are helping Iraqi school children." Westy's Storage Center in Hicksville, NY donated the packaging space, materials, and postage.

Cepelak and Proietto joined members of the New York Guard in the day's packing activities, along with Mr. Frank Greco, a member of the Long Island Parents of Deployed Soldiers whose son recently returned from duty in Iraq as a captain with the United States Marine Corps.

Members of the New York Guard expressed their satisfaction with the project's goals and the day's work. To date, nearly 18,000 boxes of supplies such as pens, pencils, notebooks, and binders, plus simple medical supplies such as diapers, lotions, and band-aids, have been delivered.

“General Douglas MacArthur once said, “No man is entitled to the blessings of freedom unless he be vigilant in its preservation,”” commented Maj. Gen. Taluto. “These fellow Rainbow Soldiers gave their lives not just for the ideal of peace and liberty for the people of Iraq, but to protect those same freedoms that are threatened here at home.”

“We shall never forget their sacrifice nor let it diminish our resolve to succeed,” he said.

As Soldiers continue their training tasks and focus their efforts and energies towards their mission in Iraq, recognitions are due for the families, employers and veterans’ groups whom all provided the support necessary for our success so far. Family Readiness Groups (FRGs) have come together in armories all across the many Rainbow Division states and we will continue to reinforce their success. Division Soldiers have long known that the “Guard is Family.” Our mission-focus overseas shall be matched only by our family-focus to support those at home who sacrifice so much for our Army and our nation.

Likewise, employers and communities have shown a tremendous outpouring of support and enthusiasm for our deployment, for it is they who make the citizen-soldier possible. Lastly, Soldier thanks go out to members of the Rainbow Division Veterans Memorial Foundation. Those veterans and family members of the 42nd Infantry Division who came before know and understand that in this coming mission, our Soldiers are confident in their leaders, their equipment and their mission ahead.

2004 AGR NCO OF THE YEAR

Staff Sgt. Micah S. Lyness
Co B 152nd Eng. Bn., 42nd Infantry Division

New York Army National Guard units from across the state sent their best representatives to the state headquarters this March to determine their top soldiers.

The 2004 New York Army National Guard held the selection board to choose the outstanding traditional, Active Guard Reserve soldiers and Non Commissioned Officer's (NCO) of the year.

New York State, Command Sgt. Maj. Bob Van Pelt, welcomed each of the candidates then the soldiers were administered a 90 question written test. While the test was going on, the NCO's reported to the drill shed and were tested on 5 predetermined Common Tasks Training (CTT).

Subject matter experts administered the CTT, from the state headquarters. The subjects included tasks on first aid, nuclear, biological and chemical, weapons and communications each candidate was evaluated to standard for each event.

Once the soldiers and NCO's finished their assignments, the NCO's were given a written test and the soldiers then performed CTT.

In the evening, the candidates, their guests and support personnel were hosted at the Ripe Tomato Restaurant in Wilton by the MACOM Command Sgt. Maj. for dinner. This gave the board members time to interact with the candidates and continue the evaluation process to better select the winners of the overall competition.

On Sunday, each candidate reported in their Class A Uniform for a 30-minute appearance board where each was asked a series of 70 questions. Once all candidates completed this process, the scores were tallied and the winners were announced.

Traditional Soldier – Spc James J. White, Co B, 152nd Eng Bn, 42nd Infantry Division; Traditional NCO – Staff Sgt Paul E. Huger, Co B, 1-108th In Bn., 27th SIB; AGR NCO – SSG Micah S. Lyness, Co B, 152nd Eng Bn., 42nd Infantry Division.

The members of the selection board were Command Sgt. Maj. Bob Van Pelt, Sgt. Maj., Command Sgt. Maj. Dick Fearnside, 42nd Infantry Division, Command Sgt. Maj. Jim Harter, 107th Corps Support Group and Command Sgt. Maj. Mike Gill, 427th Support Battalion.

In the First U.S. Army Competition, each state can only send one soldier and one NCO. The selection will make their announcement soon as to whom they have selected to represent New York State for the First Army's selection board.

The First Army selection board is expected to be held later this summer. Soldiers selected by the First Army will go on to the U.S. Army's Soldier of the Year selection competition to be held in the fall.

Guard Times Address Changes

Changed your address recently?
Is the Guard Times still coming to an old address?

If so, it may be time to check with your unit administrator. Chances are, the old address is still listed at the unit.

Computerized shipping labels are produced for Guard Times at state headquarters from the electronic data base. This information is updated through periodic submissions from the field. The unit, SIDPERS, the Personnel Services Branch and military pay all need to have a document supplied by the soldier to change the home address.

Before writing us at the Guard Times about your address change, start with your unit. It takes about two months before the change hits the system, but, guess what! The Guard Times comes out every two months. So if you have verified the unit has the correct information and the Guard Times still came to the old address, be patient. The next issue should come to the new address.

Reminder. It is the soldier's responsibility to submit address changes in a prompt manner.
