INDEX.

Practical Workings of Conscription.

The case of Mr. Samuel L. Crocker, Jr., a member of the Suffolk Bar, and a conscript from the Third District, has been widely published by the Press and Telegraph. He presented a substitute when he was first summoned to appear before the Provost Marshal, but on refusing to comply with certain terms demanded by Captain Shaw, his substitute was not received. Mr. Crocker appealed to the authorities at Washington, who sustained the Provost Marshal. The matter then rested until last Saturday, when Mr. Crocker was arrested as a deserter, found able-bodied by the examining board, and ordered into the service. He was, however, allowed a furlough. The following extract from a letter, originally published in the Post, sets forth the difficulty between himself and the Provost Marshal:—

On Friday, the 24th Aug., I appeared at the office of the Provost Marshal, of the Third District, at the appointed hour for the acceptance of substitutes, having given the required notice of my intention so to do, to offer a substitute for three years military service.

The substitute presented was examined by the surgeon and pronounced entirely satisfactory. My name, age, height, &c., were then entered upon the records, and those of my substitute were also duly recorded. The requisite oaths were then administered to my substitute by the Provost Marshal, and were duly subscribed, and all that was essential to his acceptance was fully accomplished. Capt. Shaw then inquired what sum of money he was to receive, and insisted that it should be paid into his (Shaw's) hands. I replied that I had no objection to the arrangement if the man consented to it. He said he thought he should receive his money as soon as he was accepted. Capt. Shaw replied in that case he should be placed under guard until afternoon. My man, who had already served as a volunteer in the service of his country, replied that he had no intention of deserting, but that he did not care how closely he was guarded. Upon which Capt. Shaw retorted, "Very well, sir, if you can't trust the United States, the United States won't trust you. You can go away. We won't have anything to do with you."

I then said, "Captain Shaw, I have promised this man that I would pay the money into his own hands, and I know nothing in the law that authorises you to interfere with this arrangement." To which he replied in a very insolent manner, "if you have come here to raise any of your law quibbles, you are in the wrong shop, or words to that effect. "I have come here." I replied, "to discharge my duty as a citizen of the United States, and I have taken great pains and trouble to discharge it faithfully." He then ordered me to be seized, stating that he would refer my case to the Board of Enrolment. In a few moments he addressed the Board to the effect that I had presented a man who was unwilling to comply with the rules of this office, by depositing his money with the Provost Marsba, he promising to repay it on his arrival at the rendezvous.

I then briefly addressed the Board, stating that I had been at great pains to discharge my duty, by procuring for the Government a better man than myself for the required service—that in the accomplishment of this object I had no desire to save myself labor or trouble—that I had refused to bring before them men who had offered their services for the reason that I was not satisfied with their character, or with the agents that were trafficking in them—that no objection had been offered to this man, except that he insisted that his own money should be placed in his own hands, giving as his reason therefor that he had seen during his term of service delay and inconvenience resulting from tardiness in the payment of money from the Government to the soldiers in service—that I had promised this man to pay the money into his own hands, and felt bound to carry out my agreement. The Commissioner replied, "we take no men who refuse to comply with the rules of this office." I then said, "Captain Shaw, I offer this man as my substitute; he has passed your examination, and taken and subscribed the customary oaths. I offer him here and now, without any condition, qualification or reservation whatsoever, and I demand my discharge." To which he replied, "you shan't have it; and what is more, I give you warning you will be arrested as a deserter, at the expiration of your notice, if you fail to appear in compliance to the rules of this office." I then left his office, followed by the man I had offered as my substitute.

Comment upon such proceedings is needless. Captain Shaw well knows, or if he does not, he is totally unfit for his office, that he is not the agent of the United States to receive in its behalf money furnished for substitutes, or bind government by a promise for its repayment. His receipt binds only himself individually.
