The Argus and Conscription.

From the Atlas and Argus.

One of the arguments alleged against the constitutionality of recruiting the army by Conscription, is that such a process was wholly unknown at the time of the adoption of that instrument. Conscription is the child of the French revolution.

The position of the Argus may be summed up in a dozen words. It denounces Conscription as the offspring of the "Higher Law" doctrine of Mr. SEWARD, and demands that it shall "die." And it does this in the face of the fact that Conscription is a Democratic hobby, that it was advocated by WASHINGTON, and MADISON, and MONROE; that it was made an issue in 1814—nearly every Democrat in Congress voting for it and every Federalist voting against it! And, in order to prop up its wretched case, it borrows its arguments from the memorial of the Hartford Convention.

The Argus, confronted by the "truths of history," endeavors to crawl out of its humiliating position by claiming that the Conscription, as originated and matured by WASHINGTON and MONROE, were different from that at present in operation! Who claims that they are identical? But the principle is the same. The question—and the only vital one—is:—Has the Government the right, under the Constitution, to compel the citizens of the several States to bear arms in its service?

WASHINGTON contended that it had. He claimed that every Government "possesses not only the right of personal service from its members; but the right to regulate the service on principles of equity for the general defence." Nor did he allow that this right was subordinated to State authority. On the contrary, in the very extract from his "plan," quoted by the Argus, he proposed that "the Executive of the United States, or the Commander-in-Chief of the militia of each State," should make the draft.

JAMES MONROE held to the same doctrine. In his exposition of his scheme of Conscription, he used these emphatic words:—

The idea that the United States cannot raise a regular army in any other mode than by accepting the voluntary service of individuals is believed to be repugnant to the uniform construction of all grants of power, and equally so to the first principles and leading objects of the federal compact. An unqualified grant of power gives the means necessary to carry it into effect. This is an universal maxim, which admits of no exception. The Commonwealth has a right to the service of all its citizens, or rather, the citizens composing the Commonwealth have a right, collectively and individually, to the service of each other, to repel and danger which may be menaced. The manner in which the service is to be apportioned among the citizens, and rendered by them, are objects of legislation. All that is to be dreaded in such case is the abuse of power, and happily our Constitution has provided ample security against that evil.

The Democratic Congress in 1814 was of like mind. Its voice was largely in favor of Conscription. The conclusion of Peace arrested the discussion of the question, and rendered the passage of Mr. GILES' Bill (a modification of Mr. MUNROE'S plan) unnecessary: but the position of that body on the subject was unmistakable. Not only was the right of the Federal Government to enforce a Draft indirectly through the State Executive insisted upon, but an amendment to the original bill, authorising the President, "in case of neglect or refusal of the Governor of the States to execute the provisions of the law, TO CALL DIRECTLY ON THE MILITIA OFFICERS OF THE STATES TO CARRY THEM INTO EFFECT," WAS engrafted by the Democratic majority.

Nearly every prominent Democrat of the time occupied the same position. Mr. INGERSOLL, a staunch Democrat, from whose "History of the War" of 1812 the Argus pretends to quote, in a speech in the House of Representatives, pending the discussion of the Conscription bill, thus proposed to "override the Constitution" by the enforcement of a Draft:

We must have armies and we must have money. * * * I venture to assert that the mere enactment, by something like unanimity in this House, of a good military system, with indications of acquiescence in it out of doors, would secure us a peace forthwith, without the necessity of enforcing the system. * * * I appeal to the gentleman who are so clamorous for peace, to consider for an object so desirable. That system, in my opinion, is a classification of the white male population of the country for the purpose of draft in the regular armies. You may call it by what odious, ugly name you will, (the Federalists then, as the Argus and its yoke-fellows now, endeavored to excite the passions of the ignorant by denouncing the Draft as "odious" and "tyrannical,") Conscription, or what not, but it is the only sufficient, the only Republican, the only just, the only equal plan for applying the physical means to the end of common military defence and protection.

Referring to the plea that the Draft was "unconstitutional," he said:—

As to the constitutionality of this measure, I refuse to quarrel. I hold it to be too clear for argument. Independent of the explicit terms of the Constitution, this power (that of enforcing military service) is inherent in the nature of the Government. Its exercise and extent must be referred to their regulation to a sound discretion. I adopt the sentiment of the Chairman of the Military Committee (Mr. TRUMBULL) that the Constitution authorizes it, and if it does not, such a Constitution is not worth having or regarding.

The Argus itself, in those days, was an earnest champion of "conscription," and supported its most prominent advocate, Mr. MONROE, for President. Indeed, our neighbor no longer ago than last summer still adhered to its time honored faith on the subject, denounced volunteering as inadequate and expensive, and called upon the Administration to enforce the Draft. On the 28th of August, 1862, it gave utterance to such patriotic words as these:—

Mr. STANTON does great injustice to New York, and to the army of her sons at present mustered on the battle fields of the Union, when he attributes to the State any disposition to dispute the authority of the Federal Government to call upon her citizens for support, or any disposition on the part of her citizens to evade the duty they owe to their country. Whenever the necessities of the nation demand that a conscription shall be made, however vile in its limits, the people of New York will cheerfully submit to their full share of the burden.

Thus it will be seen that the principle of Conscription has been a cardinal point of Democratic doctrine from the organization of that party down to the past few months. It was one of the principal issues between the Democrats and Federalists in the last war. The latter, as do the Argus and its fellows now, denounced it as "tyrannical," "unconstitutional" and "odious." The Hartford Convention stigmatized it as a "deliberate, dangerous and culpable infraction of the Constitution, affecting the sovereignty of the State and the liberties of the people." A prominent "Blue Light" member of Congress declared, as do the depraved New York Express, World, News, &c., that Conscription "would not be submitted to by the people; that they ought to resist such oppression—such infringements of their rights,—and he hoped they would

These were the words of the "peace men" of the last war. Their authors have left an unhappy memory behind them. They did their best to embarrass the Government and oppose the "wicked war" against Great Britain. But they did not succeed. The country was saved in spite of them. The "despots" they denounced became the idols of the people. President MADISON retired with honor. Mr. MONROE, his Secretary of War—the author and champion of Conscription—was elected President. The party that favored a “vigorous prosecution of the war,” and stood by the honor of the country, became the dominant party and maintained its power almost unchallenged for thirty years. Will the Argus heed the lesson; or will it, following the lead of its bad passions instead of the lead of its reason, repeat the folly and share the fate of the old

THE NUMBER OF ENLISTMENTS IN ALBANY SINCE THE DRAFT WAS ORDERED—WHAT SHOULD BE DONE.—The following is a correct transcript of the number of enlistments in the city of Albany, with the names of the organizations to which they are attached, since the 11th of last May, to an including the 24th of August, as taken from the record of the Examining Surgeon, Dr. Peter P. Staats. The whole number enlisted and credited to this city is 783, of which 101 were rejected upon a medical examination, leaving an actual credit of six hundred and thirty-seven, as follows:

	Albany.	Elsewhere.
13th Cavalry.....	46	8
7th Artillery.....	146	51
15th Cavalry.....	1	—

Up to November 10, of last year, the Adjutant General admits a surplus in the county of 150. Between November and May (of which we have, as yet no reliable statistics), probably at least 250 were enlisted, which should be credited to Albany. Making that estimate, the result (in the county) would be:

Surplus Nov. 10th, '82. (Adj. Gen. rep.)..	150
Enlisted from Nov. 10 to May 11.....	250
Since May 11th.....	637

Total.....1037

These figures are below rather than above the truth; and it is eminently just that they should be presented to the proper department, that old Albany—which has been pre-eminently prompt in responding to every appeal upon her patriotism—may be duly credited upon the forthcoming draft.

Should Albany be credited on the draft with the 1,037 men enlisted since November last, it will require but very little exertion to raise the balance of her quota by voluntary enlistments. We don't wish to see a draft take place in the city, when it can easily be prevented by recruiting. Some attention should be paid to this important subject, and we therefore call upon Mayor Perry, who is Chairman of the Executive War Committee, to convene that body and take immediate steps in the premises. If an effort is only made, we are satisfied that Albany can get clear of the draft. Come, wake up, gentlemen of the War Committee.

The Quota of Albany.

On referring to the Report of ex-Adjutant General HILLHOUSE, we find that in November last our city was in excess of all the quotas levied upon her, two hundred and four men. From that time until June last, we have no information as to the number of volunteers raised here; but it appears, by the books of Paymaster General VAN BUREN, that since the 10th of June to the 10th of August (only two months), some five hundred and twenty men were enlisted here. These, with the excess credited Albany last Fall, will make up, within two or three hundred, our total quota under the draft that is now being enforced.

This is a matter of the greatest importance to our citizens, and the War Committee or the Common Council should set to work, without delay, to ascertain the precise number raised here during the seven months between November last and June of this year. There is no doubt but that the entire quota of the city, and more too, has been raised; and those who have had charge of the matter heretofore should see to it that the city receives full credit for what has been accomplished. Other localities are sending messengers and committees to the Adjutant General's office, to ascertain how they stand in this respect, and there is no reason why Albany, with a record so honorable, should be neglected. The Common Council having voted to pay the commutation price for every man drafted, hundreds of thousands of dollars will be saved to the treasury by securing credit for all our volunteers, and thus avoiding the draft.

Clerks are now at work at the Capitol to ascertain, as near as possible, the excess or deficiency of every town, city and county in the State, on former calls, and the local authorities are invited to communicate their claims, in this respect, to the proper Department.

[Argus.

Several weeks since, we suggested some movement to ascertain how nearly our city and county had filled up their quotas. We knew that we had raised a handsome surplus on the last call, that recruiting had progressed somewhat actively since, and that a fair count would present both city and county in a favorable light. Nothing formally has been done, however, thus far; but tables are being prepared which will enable the proper authorities to judge pretty correctly what has been done.

In Albany, Rochester and Buffalo riotous demonstrations were exhibited, but they were promptly put down. There appears to have been a secret understanding throughout this State, among the sympathizers with Rebellion, that these riots should be simultaneous.

How About the Draft!

If we are interrogated once we are an hundred times daily, as to when the draft will take place in this city, and throughout the State, and being entirely ignorant of the intentions of Government with reference to the matter, our replies are not very satisfactory, we are sure.

Gov. Seymour and his friends, not only, but a large number of influential supporters of the Administration, are of the opinion that injustice has been done to this State in the matter of the quota which she is called upon to furnish under the draft. They claim that New York has furnished more than her quota under the calls for volunteers, and that this excess should be deducted from the quota to be raised
