

New York's Historic Armories: An Illustrated History

By local author Nancy L. Todd; see display copies in main lobby

Available at many local bookstores (e.g., the Open Door in Schenectady, the Book House in Stuyvesant Plaza, the Spotty Dog in Hudson, and all Barnes and Noble stores in the area; retail: $50 plus tax)
Also available on-line at SUNYPress.edu and amazon.com

The book is one component of a project begun in 1992 when DMNA and the New York State Historic Preservation Office joined forces to preserve and protect the Empire State's pre-World War II armories as monuments to the role of the Army National Guard in American military history.

"This attractive and engaging book highlights New York's large and distinguished group of historic armories—national treasures associated with a revered history of security and peacekeeping ... I am confident that this book will further our understanding and appreciation of the state's historic armories and their contribution to safeguarding our communities and citizens."

Governor George E. Pataki

"As the men and women of our New York National Guard continue their great tradition of defending freedom for their fellow citizens, we applaud this exceptional and unique opportunity to remember the past through the beautiful architectural structures that make up the foundation of our force."

Major General Joseph J. Taluto

Nancy L. Todd, an architectural historian with an M.A. in American history, is a Program Analyst at the New York State Historic Preservation Office. In 1997 she received the Adjutant General's Award for extraordinary contributions to the historic preservation of New York's historic armories.