FORT DRUM, NY – Rainbow Division Soldiers have turned their vehicles into rolling stock for their final destination—Iraq, and Operation Iraqi Freedom 3.

Division Soldiers conducted the first of three railhead operations here on Sunday, September 26, loading their first group of vehicles—160 in all, including trucks, trailers, and track vehicles—onto railroad flatcars for shipment to Kuwait. It was another milestone along the Rainbow Division’s road from mobilization to deployment for Operation Iraqi Freedom 3, according to MAJ Edward Walther, officer in charge of the railhead operation.

“This is the first railhead operation for the 42nd Infantry Division since World War II,” said Walther. “This is the first time since World War II that the division, in its entirety, is rolling.”

Roll they did. Rainbow Soldiers mustered before dawn Sunday to stage their vehicles near the rail yard. Wearing Kevlar helmets, reflective belts, and gloves the Soldiers worked until late afternoon, driving Hummvees, 5-ton trucks and armored personnel carriers onto narrow flatbed railcars—a potentially dangerous task, according to Walther.

“You’re basically driving down a railcar,” Walther said. “Any one of the vehicles can slip off.”

Soldiers stationed on each railcar ground-guided vehicles down the railcars and kept drivers safe and on track. In the Indian summer afternoon, the Soldiers transformed the railcars into a vast, mobile 42nd Infantry Division motor pool. Walther said the Soldiers made the mission a success, despite their inexperience with railhead operations.

“Very few people argued,” he said. “The cooperation was exceptional. There were some lessons learned. Bottom line—the vehicles were loaded, and no one got hurt.”

Walther also praised the expertise of the civilian employees.

“Whatever they said to do, we did. The safety briefing was excellent.”

The vehicles will go by rail to Philadelphia, where civilian stevedores will drive them aboard ships and stow them with other unit equipment, including 42nd Infantry Division equipment containers and helicopters. The helicopters will be partially disassembled and shrink-wrapped for the nearly month-long voyage, according to MAJ Bernie Spoerri, a 42nd Infantry Division Transportation officer.

About a dozen Division Soldiers will travel with the equipment aboard each ship, added Spoerri. These Soldiers, called ‘supercargoes’, will routinely check the vehicles for leaks or other problems during the ocean crossing. The equipment will be off-loaded by Soldiers in Kuwait and placed in a marshalling area to await 42nd Infantry Division Soldiers.

The railhead operations will be completed next week.

“This is another step to deployment,” said Walther. “We trained with our equipment. Now our equipment is being shipped. We’ll marry up with our equipment in Kuwait and move forward into Iraq.”

RAINBOW DIVISION VETERANS MEMORIAL FOUNDATION

Membership in the Rainbow Division Veterans Memorial Foundation, the Association of all those who served in the famed 42nd Rainbow Infantry Division in either World War I or World War II, that now includes the New York National Guard Chapter of the 42nd Infantry Division (Mech), is now open to anyone who has worn or now wears the Rainbow patch as a member of the National Guard.

In 1998, at the Annual meeting in Duluth, the foundation's constitution and bylaws were changed to allow the New York National Guard 42nd Division to form a chapter, but only one chapter was allowed. This past July, at the annual meeting in Memphis, a new change was added allowing chapters to be formed in any of the states where the 42nd has units. This means that now any six people who presently wear the Rainbow patch or have worn it in the past are eligible to form a new chapter. National dues are $10 and there is a $3.50 charge for the charter.

As the Rainbow veterans of World War I have passed away and as those veterans of Rainbow in World War II are passing on, we need your support to carry on the great traditions of Rainbow Division.

If possible, try to attend one of our upcoming events: Veterans Day celebration in both Birmingham, Alabama or Garden City, Long Island, New York; our Midyear meeting in Charleston, South Carolina, February 9-13, 2005; or our Annual meeting in Indianapolis, Indiana, July 12-16, 2005.
