The drafting was quietly and pleasantly concluded between 5 and 6 o'lock, and the throng dispersed as though nothing whatever had happened out of the usual tenor of daily life. The Marshal took occasion to congratulate all present upon this agreeable result. Lieut. BARGER, of Provost-Marshal NICHOLSON'S Staff, was present on behalf of his superior officers, all day, and has the thanks of the Press for his attention to their comfort. Several of the Metropolitan force were likewise especially obliging, and deserve mention. The draft recommenced at 9 o'clock yesterday morning.

The Second District Continued.

The conscription in the Second Congressional District was resumed yesterday morning at the office of the Provost-Marshal, No. 26 Grand street, Williamsburgh, for the drafting of the quota of 1,027 men from the Tenth, Twelfth and Fourteenth Wards of Brooklyn. The several quotas were:

Tenth Ward quota, 321, 50 per cent., 161—482
Twelfth Ward quota, 137, 50 per cent., 66—202
Fourteenth Ward quota, 228, 50 per cent., 114—342—l,027

The crowd present was not large, and seemed composed mainly of workingmen, sober and orderly in their demeanor, and in some instances evincing considerable anxiety as to the proceedings of the day. A force similar to that of the day previous, of both military and police, were near at hand to quell any disturbance which might have arisen, but a display of power was avoided by the authorities.

The Tenth Ward Fifth Sub-District stood first to be drawn. A Committee was chosen to count the ballots before placing them in the wheel, consisting of Alderman NODINE, Supervisor HAZARD, Ex-Assemblyman THOMAS, Mr. S. FROST and Ex-Alderman HINMAN. The count having proven correct, and this fact announced by Alderman NODINE, the draft proceeded in the usual manner.

TWELFTH WARD.

After an intermission of about an hour, the proceedings were resumed for the Sixth Sub-District or Twelfth Ward, when the ballots were counted by a Committee, consisting of Alderman O'Keefe, Supervisor Driscoll, C. H. Murphy, M. D., and J. J. Delaney, Esq.

The number of ballots, including the fifty per cent, was stated at 203.

Shortly before 2 o'clock the wheel began to revolve, with the following result:

A. Anderson, F Van Brunt, near William.

B. A. Anderson, F Van Brunt, near William.

C. Anderson, F Van Brunt, near William.

E. Anderson, F Van Brunt, near William.

F. Anderson, F Van Brunt, near William.

The drawing was resumed in this District yesterday morning.

It is to be regretted that the officers connected with the draft at this point have been so negligent in furnishing the Press facilities for giving the names of the conscripts to the public. On the first day the meagerness of arrangement and official inattention was attributed to a want of acquaintance with the needs of the reporters and the flurry of a commencement. The same line of conduct has, however, marked the treatment of those connected with the Press during the succeeding days. Instead of looking upon the representatives of the various news offices as officials engaged in the work of aiding them...

Third District.

The drawing was resumed in this District this morning.
to diffuse among the people a knowledge of the progress of their labors, they seem to regard them as troublesome individuals, whose comfort was in no way a matter of concern, and whose business they were not called to assist.

The names of those drafted were read so rapidly in this district, that it was with the greatest difficulty they could be taken down. Questions in regard to doubtful names or streets, were generally disregarded by Commissioner Beebe, who rushed ahead, leaving the Reporters to make out what he said as best they might.

This want of courtesy to the Press is mentioned, not because it is pleasant to find fault, but because the public should know that inaccuracies which may occur in this district are not owing to any neglect of the Reporters, but to the lack of accommodation on the part of officials, who could not seem to appreciate the position and duties of an agent of the Press.

At 9 o'clock the Committee, consisting of Messrs. Van Brunt, Oakley, and Lee, began to count the slips containing the names of those enrolled in the Seventh Sub-District, which is the Eleventh Ward of Brooklyn. This Ward includes all that part of the city lying between Fulton, Flatbush, Atlantic, Flushing, and Washington avenues, and Navy, Johnson, and Bridge streets.

At the close of the counting, the Committee announced the whole number of names to be 3,985. This tallying with the number on the Provost-Marshal's list, the slips were deposited in the wheel, and the drawing commenced for the 1,050 names which constituted the quota of the ELEVENTH WARD.

Notes:

- The text contains a list of names and addresses, which are likely part of the draft notices or a similar official record. These names and addresses are typical of what would be found in a draft notice, listing individuals who were to be enrolled. The text describes the process of counting and selecting names, which is a common administrative task in draft records.
- The names are listed in alphabetical order, which is a standard method for organizing such records.
- The text also mentions the editors' appreciation for the work of the Reporters, indicating a recognition of the difficult and sometimes thankless task of reporting on and documenting draft notices.
