

name of a hard working and patriotic regiment, I know not where such an one is to be found. That there have been instances of cowardice and desertion cannot be denied; but as a body they have ever manifested a spirit of obedience, activity and heroism.

The late "Thanksgiving Day," under Proclamation of the President, was observed by the brigade in a manner similar to the Fast Day in May. Remarks were made by Chaplains Bullon of the 16th Maine, Cook of the 94th New York, French of the 39th Massachusetts, and Ward of the 104th New York, with the timely testimony of Gen. Briggs of the 1st division (formerly Gen. Wadsworth's). The attendance was large of officers and privates, who gave most respectful attention throughout. To us in the army there is much in the "signs of the times" for which to be thankful and from which to take hope. If Charleston falls (as it will eventually), then follows Savannah, while Mobile is already being attacked by Gen. Grant. What then?—a grand attack upon Washington of all available Confederate forces: victory to us and the end of the rebellion! Oh for a righteous, honorable, permanent peace! God grant it to us, afflicted nation.

During and for two weeks after the battle of Gettysburg, I was at the White Church Hospital, where I was again called to witness scenes far more numerous and agonizing than those at Bull Run and Chancellorsville. About four hundred wounded officers and privates—Union and Confederate—were gathered in a barn and under tents, receiving surgical treatment from Drs. Chambers, Richmond, Derby and Wheeler, assisted by attendants and nurses many and faithful. To each of four Chaplains were assigned special duties, one of mine being to attend the dying and bury the dead. I committed twenty-four to their hastily dug graves (twelve Union and twelve Confederate). A plain board with name, company and regiment, marks the spot where lies buried, coffinless and shroudless, the form of a loved husband, son or brother. Better this than the condition of thousands lying in piles upon the rocks where was made what is regarded the most fearful charge ever known in our national history. I was so near as to hear the yell which attends such attacks, and hear the sharp musketry. At Chancellorsville I counted seventy boomings of cannon each minute, but here they were countless. No word more perfectly describes the scene and results than Satanic. I visited the entire battle ground, and the trees look as if a sirocco has passed over them, their vitality departing through the perforations made by shot and shell and ball. And the graves—fields covered with them. He

When speak of peace as that which the army desires, it should not be understood "peace on any terms"—very far from it; but peace consistent with the claims of truth and righteousness and the constitution. To "conquer" such a "peace" they are ready to fight while to repossess it is their hearts' longed desire. "Oh that I could see a battle," says the warrior at home. "I have seen one and do not wish to see another," says the warrior. But it is not on the battlefield alone that the soldier suffers. It is an uninterrupted series of sacrifices from the hour he leaves home till he returns to its quiet retreat and social intercourse. We shall welcome the victors, but we anticipate for them many a sorrow. They must come or all is lost, but joyous will be to them the day when their services are no longer needed on the entangled and battle field.

Casualties in the Fighting at Hanover Junction, May 23d.

The Tribune publishes a list of casualties in the 2d and 5th Army Corps in the fighting on Monday afternoon, May 23d, in which we find the following names from local regiments:

- 49th—Sergt. F. Lendmeyer, F, chest.
 - 86th—1st Sergt. James B. Smith, E, abdomen.
 - 8th N. Y. Heavy Artillery—Thomas Granville, M; Sergt. McDonald, D, back; Francis Coore, F, finger.

- 76th—J. Ruleff, I, thigh; 1st Sergt. J. J. Teese, H, hand.
 - 104th—F. Starr, G, leg.

We copy the above from the Tribune, which is the only paper that publishes any list of the casualties in this fighting. Other names will probably be reported in a day or two.

PRISONERS IN RICHMOND.—Capt.

John Daily, of company I, One Hundred and Fourth regiment, is now a prisoner of war in Richmond, together with Lieut. McCleary, and the following members of Co. I, captured Aug. 19:

- Sergeants Daniel Liddy, Patrick Casey, Michael A. Malloy; Corporals Thos. Gregg, Jas. Murphy; Privates P. Clifford, P. Cattahan, J. Gimmers, B. Compton, J. Cadden, J. Dwyer, N. Green, L. Harrington, J. Kirby, G. King, M. Kelly, D. Kelly, J. Law, O. Lane, and C. H. Morey.

They are all well. Lieut. McCleary resided in West Troy. At the battle of Cold Harbor, June 3d, he received three wounds, and it was supposed he was killed. He was captured by the enemy. This fact was not known, however, until the 15th of July, when it was ascertained that he was a prisoner. He is still at Libby prison.

Corporal Henry Zipkie, hit in the breast by a spent cannon ball; badly bruised, but getting along finely.

Privates, Geo. W. Parr, knee severely.

" John P. Wells, " regarded dangerous till to-day, doing better.

" Nelson J. Penndock, shot in arm and not seen since, so far as known here.

Nathaniel Wallis, in finger.

The balance of the Company, 30 in all, except 3 are missing or prisoners, including Lt. A. J. Rose, known to be a prisoner.

Lieut. Tremby was taken prisoner, and having been assistant at amputation, he got a case of Surgeon Instruments in his bloody hands, and played Surgeon well enough to pass the guard when our prisoners were marched out of the town.

104th Regiment, Company D.

Killed—1st Lieut. Thos. Johnson, in Wednesday's fight.

Private S. B. Lewis, " "

Wounded, Serg't Joseph Lafath, in leg.

" Capt. G. H. Star.

Prisoners, 2d Lieut. E. Tuttle,

" Corporal Ira Waring.

" Private, Geo. P. Pierce.

" Valentine Kartz.

Missing, Ira Conrad.

" Joseph Montz.

104th, Company A.

Killed—1st Sergeant, T. J. Curtiss, had taken colors from the second man shot down with them. He refused to release his hold of them, till quite dead, when it took a strong force to release the staff from his dying grasp.

" Private Wm. Woodruff and Wm. L. Davis.

Wounded—3d Serg't N. A. Gearhart, in thigh severely.

" 4th Serg't S. P. Havens, in arm.

" Corporal E. Fancher, finger shot off,

Privates, Silas Austin, shot through both thighs, badly cut, doing well.

" E. J. Whipple, shoulder slightly.

" M. Hurd, flesh wound through both thighs, doing well.

" W. Magee, in ankle.

" Hiram Passage, bruised by limb of a tree.

Prisoners—1st Serg't R. R. Weed.

" 2d A. T. Lamson.

BIVOUAC OF THE 104th REG'T N. Y. V. }
On the western slope of South Mountain, at }
Turner's Gap, July 9th, 1863. }

To the Editor of the New-Yorker:

Sitting on a rock on the western slope of South Mountain, where we fought last September, and under the shade of the small chestnuts that cover the mountain, I have spent a few moments preparing a list of the casualties which our regiment sustained in the late action at Gettysburg. I have had a list prepared for some days, but could not send it out, and marching in the rain yesterday it was spoiled. Having an opportunity to mail letters to-day through the 11th Corps, I avail myself of it to send you the list, which is all I can do at present. I have no time to give you the particulars of the battle, or that portion of it in which our regiment took part, and which came under my eye. Suffice it that we lost heavily, but whipped the enemy very severely, who are making tracks for the Potomac, and the Union forces close upon their heels, skirmishing every day. I anticipated this morning another fight to-day, but they are still striving to get away. Our troops have advanced considerably to-day, but no engagement as yet. The prospect is that Lee's whole army will be taken, or so much demoralized that it will be good for nothing hereafter. General Dix, I understand, is at Culpepper with a strong force to cut off the retreat of Lee should he succeed in crossing the Potomac, which is hardly possible, as our cavalry forces have destroyed their pontoons, and the river is very high, from six to ten feet above low-water mark at the fords.

Hoping that ere this reaches you the Confederate Army of the Potomac will be no more as an army, I am, sir,

Very respectfully yours,

GILBERT G. PREY.

Col. Com'dg.

Major Henry V. Colt,

It is with the highest gratification we learn that Gov. Seymour has conferred upon Lieut. Henry V. Colt the rank of Major of the 104th Regiment N. Y. S. V. Such preferment, and higher, has long been deserved and looked for by the many who are well acquainted with Mr. C's fitness and official claim. If long continuance in the service, tried ability, unimpeachable integrity, skill and faithfulness in meeting all the duties of any trust thus far committed to him, kindness of heart and manner coupled with clear and intelligent views of the issues at stake in the present national struggle, and a whole souled devotion to the Government, and the will of the people, entitles their possessor to military preferment, there is not in the army a more worthy claimant than our respected townsman. These are considerate expressions written by one who as a staff officer was long brought into daily and most intimate acquaintance with Mr. C., and knows him well as a man and an officer. It may be safely added that no appointment could be made in more entire concurrence with the judgment and wishes of the regiment than this. With such leaders as Col. Prey, Lieut. Col. Swang, and Major Colt, the 104th will long maintain the position which it now holds as a model for discipline and valor—so acknowledged by the Com. General. It is hoped that Major Colt will be allowed to visit us ere long, having been almost two years absent. When that time does come let him meet with a public reception worthy the recipient, and creditable to the community. W.

Our Army Correspondence.

From the 104th Regiment.

Below we give the list of casualties in the above Regiment at the battle of Gettysburg, kindly furnished us by Major Strang. The record is an honorable, yet fearful one. The Regiment previous to the battle, numbered only about two hundred and fifty men. The next day after the battle but forty-five privates and one line officer could be mustered for service. On Monday we had the pleasure of meeting Lieut. Dow who was severely wounded. He received a shot in the breast, the ball passing out through the shoulder, and another in the arm above the elbow. He is as comfortable as could be expected, and is home on a leave of absence of twenty days. It is not at all probable he will be fit for duty at the expiration of that time. Lieut. Dow after being wounded was taken prisoner, and was in the hands of the rebels for four days, when he was retaken. The small remnant of forty-five men were detailed for skirmishers the next day after the battle. The Regiment is now so reduced that the organization can hardly be preserved a great while longer. It has seen hard service, and the men have nobly performed their duty, never finching or faltering in a single instance. The record is one that the men may with pride turn to.

MR. NORTON—Dear Sir:—I have delayed sending a list of the casualties of our Regiment in the recent engagement at Gettysburg, partly because I wished to have it correct, and partly to await the termination of the action. The following is the list corrected up to July sixth:—

Officers killed or died of wounds, 1—1st Lt. Thomas Johnston, Co. D.

Officers wounded, 9—Lieut. Col. Henry G. Tuthill, abdomen; Capt. Henry A. Wiley, B., hand; Capt. Cha's W. Fisher, I., leg; 1st Lt. Austin N. Richardson, F., hand; 2d Lt. Wm. J. Starks, B., hip; 2d Lt. Jasper M. Griggs, C., leg; 2d Lt. Adoniram J. Rose, E., side; 2d Lt. James W. Dow, H., shoulder; 2d Lt. James H. Cain, I., shoulder.

Officers missing and prisoners, 10—Captain Wm. C. Wilson, K., prisoner; Capt. Geo. H. Starr, D., prisoner; Adj. Homer Stull, prisoner; 1st Lt. John Daily, I., prisoner; 1st Lieut. Reuben R. Weed, A., prisoner; 1st Lt. Adam Dixon; 1st Lt. George L. Snyder; 2d Lt. E. A. Tuthill, prisoner; 2d Lt. Albert T. Lamson, prisoner; 2d Lt. Walter S. Stephens.

Enlisted men killed or since died of wounds, 81—1st Serg't Thomas J. Curtis, A.; private Wm. L. Davis, A.; private Wm. Woodruff, A.; private Alonzo E. Mix, B.; private J. The Casualties.

As yet we have received no full record of the casualties in the late great battles, but we must expect to find when the record is received to note the names of some from this County who have been wounded, or who have yielded up life in behalf of the Government. The 104th Regiment, "Wadsworth Guards," and the 130th—now 1st New York Dragoons, were also in the different battles, as also the 14th Heavy Artillery, were in the fight. A report on Monday stated that every commissioned and non-commissioned officer of the 104th was either killed or wounded, and that on Friday the Regiment numbered but one hundred and sixteen. This would show severe work. After the second day's battle at Gettysburg all that could be numbered was forty-seven men and two or three Regimental officers. We give a list of the wounded so far as received:

104th Regiment—John Fleming, Co. B, finger; M. Counterwright, Co. C, finger; Jno. Kellogg, Co. B, finger; Corp. O. Long, Co. D. Sergeant D. E. Curtis, do. face; Sergt. C. Clark, Co. F; G. Winter, Co. D. hand; S. Streeter, Co. C, fingers; J. Darragh, Co. D, ankle; G. Daniels, Co. F, shoulder; Corp. E. Faucher, hand; Cort. G. Purvist, Co. D, finger; Chas. Barborn, Co. A, hip; Sergt. Alva Laid, right elbow; Jno. Kelley, Co. D, finger; Geo. Pierce, do. foot; John Brennan; Henry Timbrook; Robert R. Schoonover, sick; John Roth, sick. Most of these are in hospitals at Washington.

From the character of the wounds it is quite evident that the rebels had a large force of sharpshooters.

The 104th Regiment.

NEAR PETERSBURG, Aug. 20, 1864.

EDITOR HERALD:—I have just time as Mail is leaving to say that our veteran 104th is now in the hands of the rebels, the whole regiment, officers and men, except one Lieutenant and some fifteen or twenty men having been taken prisoners in an attempt by their Corps to hold the Weldon railroad. Some six or eight men had been wounded in the skirmishes which preceded the fight in which they were captured and are in the hospital. Only two of these, so far as I know are from our part of the State, are A. Higgins, of Co. E., from Howard, foot amputated, doing finely, and J. G. Young, of the same Co., severely wounded in the foot. I hasten the announcement of it, hoping it will reach you in time for your next week's paper, and will learn more of the particulars and give them within a day or two. Israel White, of Co. B. is the only one I recognized as from near Dansville among those left, perhaps there are more as I did not see all.

I may just say in addition, that though the losses in the Corps have been serious, there is no doubt that the enemy's loss in killed and wounded in these fights so far have been more than double ours, and that we hold all the positions gained, and with a good prospect of the complete success of the movement.

The heavy rains of the past few days have made the roads next to impassable, and may if continued compel the abandonment of the enterprise, but so far all are in fine spirits and very hopeful. In haste, T.

Co. I—Sergeants O. Crough, Dan... Corp'l Thomas Gregg; privates F. Murphy, N. Green, Barnard Compton, Patrick Casey, P. Walker.

Co. K—Serg. Patrick Conway; Corp'l R. S. Canfield; privates J. Kenney, Thomas K. Leyden, Reuban C. Galusha, H. P. Main, Thomas H. Malley.

The above list speaks for itself, making comment unnecessary, and description I will leave for those who had more time for seeing than I had. Colonel Prey and Assistant Surgeon Rugg had their horses shot under them, but escaped themselves. Lt. Col. Tutbill's wound while severe is, I am glad to say, not dangerous. Very resp'y, C. R. S.

present at the surrender of Lee. It has had in all on its rolls 1,000 men, and returns with 243. For more than a year the Rev. Mr. Ward, the veteran missionary to India, was its chaplain. Gilbert P. Pray was the Colonel from October, 1862, to March, 1865. The names of battles inscribed on its flag is as follows:

Bull Run second, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Wilderness, Spottsylvania, North Anna River, Bethesda Church, Petersburg and Weldon Railroad.

In all of these the regiment bore itself with conspicuous gallantry, and effectually secured the confidence and regard of commanding and general officers.

Of the officers of the regiment at its organization only three are connected with it now—Lieut. Col. J. R. Strang, who went out as 2d Lieutenant of Co. G, Major Wm. C. Willson, who went out as 2d Lieutenant of Co. K, and Capt. James A. Gault, of Co. G. Major Henry V. Colt, who went out as Quartermaster, was afterwards promoted to Major, and was for a long time on duty here in command of the rebel prison; the duties of which laborious and delicate position he discharged with such success and justice as to win the esteem and regard of every misguided man under his command.

Letter from the 104th Regiment.

3D DIVISION HOSPITAL, 5TH CORPS, }
August 22, 1864. }

EDITOR REPUBLICAN—Sir—On the 18th inst. our cavalry and the 5th corps, by a well executed "flank movement," obtained possession of the Weldon railroad, about six or seven miles south of Petersburg, and though the rebels have made three desperate attempts to retake this main line of communication between Richmond and the southern portion of the Confederacy, they have been repulsed each time with fearful slaughter. But our joy is mingled with sadness in consequence of the loss in prisoners which we have sustained in holding our position.

The first battle occurred on the 18th, and our losses were not heavy, having only about seventy wounded sent to our division hospital. But on the 19th a vigorous assault was made on our line, a portion of which they carried, and were thus enabled to get on the flank and rear of our division, and captured at least one third of the entire division, while they were vainly striving to hold their ground. All commissioned officers, and about one hundred of the men of the 104th N. Y. who went into the fight, are supposed to be prisoners, and only twenty-two are known to have escaped.

About twenty sick and wounded had been sent to this hospital on the 18th inst., which, with the hospital attendants, ambulance men, teamsters, musicians, &c., and the fifty-seven new men who had just been sent us (but being unarmed were not put into the fight), will make about one hundred and twenty men in the regiment. But I have not learned what disposition will be made of them.

When the fighting commenced a division of the 9th corps came promptly to our support, and enabled us to retake the ground we had lost.

On the 21st another attempt was made to drive us from the railroad, but we almost annihilated one division of rebels, and nearly all the wounded that came into our hospitals were rebels; and never before have I seen the number of wounded rebels in our hospitals so far exceed our own. Our men are jubilant over the result of the last fight, and the battle-field is in our possession, and is thickly strewn with rebel dead.

Col. Tilden, of the 16th Regiment Me., Vol., was among the the prisoners, but escaped near Petersburg and has reached our lines. He says Lieut.-Col. Strang is not with the rest of the 104th, and there is rumor that he is wounded; but he may have escaped unhurt after being captured.

I herewith enclose a list of those who were in the fight, but escaped, and also a list of sick and wounded:

Letter from the 104th Regiment.

HEAD QUARTERS 104TH REG. N. Y. VOLS. }
Sept. 4, 1864. }

FRIEND NORTON—I send you a list of our losses for the 18th and 19th of August, near the Yellow House, Va., and if you can find a place in your paper for it you will do me a great favor, and will answer a great many letters now coming to me inquiring for the men. My duties are now very laborious, being the only Line Officer on duty with the regiment, and acting in the double capacity of Adjutant and Quarter-Master; and I must necessarily neglect to answer many letters, very much in conflict with my principles and feelings.

I would further state that we have received 243 recruits from Elmira, and we now have quite a regiment again, minus officers. Our field return this morning gives 3 officers and 325 enlisted men. Capt. Wm. W. Graham, 39th Mass. Vols., is now in command of the regiment, and his fine qualities as a gentleman and officer are highly appreciated. And under his supervision you may expect to hear a good report of the regiment, and when properly drilled you may chance to hear of their fighting qualities again if they have an opportunity. Dr. Charles H. Richmond and your humble servant constitute the three officers present for duty. With a hope that we may soon see our old companions in arms again, and our cause and regiment still flourish, I close.

I am, respectfully, your old't serv't,
SENECA WARNER, Jr.,
Lieut. & Adj't. 104th Reg. N. Y. Vols.

The 104th in Elmira.

The Elmira Advertiser of yesterday announces that the 104th regiment (Wadsworth Guards) are in that city, at Barracks No. 1, awaiting payment and discharge. They arrived on Saturday evening.

The 104th was organized at Geneseo, in the Fall and Winter of 1861-2, and was named "The Wadsworth Guards," in honor of the noble and patriotic citizen whose name is a household word wherever liberty and virtue dwell, and who afterwards gave his life as a heroic and willing sacrifice upon the altar of his country. The regiment has seen as much service and hard fighting as any in the field, and has borne itself through all with unflinching zeal and undaunted bravery. The record of battles inscribed upon its flag, and the thinned and decimated condition of its once serried ranks, are the best evidences of the deeds it has done, and the honors it has won. While it has been honored in the distinguished name it bore, it has conferred honor in return, and fully justified the confidence reposed in it by the intelligent and patriotic people from whose midst it went.

The original Field and Staff officers were as follows:

Colonel—John Rorbach.
Lieutenant Colonel—Wells Kenyon.
Major—Lewis C. Skinner.
Surgeon—Enos G. Chase.
Assistant Surgeon—D. S. Lander.
Chaplain—Daniel Russell.
Adjutant—Fred T. Vance.
Quartermaster—Henry V. Colt.

The present roster is as follows:

Lieutenant Colonel (commanding)—John R. Strong.
Major—William C. Willson.
Surgeon—C. H. Richmond.
Chaplain—Alfred C. Roe.
Captains—C. Timpton, A. Dixon, J. M. Griggs, W. L. Tremblay, A. N. Richardson, J. A. Gault, E. A. Tutill.
First Lieutenants—T. W. Coothingham, Jas. Cullen (Acting Quartermaster), T. S. Bates, Alva Lord, Francis Palmer, J. A. Cary, J. R. Jarvis (Acting Adjutant).
Second Lieutenant—Charles L. Isaacs.

The Advertiser gives the following history and incidents connected with the Regiment since its organization:

The regiment, when it entered the service, reached Washington as the army, under McClellan, was about to start on the Peninsula campaign. It was attached to the 1st Corps, under McDowell, and formed a part of General Duryea's brigade, which occupied Catlett's Station during the summer of 1862. It was with Pope's army in his march to the Rapidan in August, 1862—was present at the battle of Cedar Mountain, but did not take an active part, and was engaged in all the skirmishes that occurred during the retreat to Manassas. At the second battle of Bull Run it suffered large loss; also at South Mountain and Antietam, Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville.

At Gettysburg, on the first day's fight, it went into the battle with twenty-six officers and three hundred and fifty men, and came out with four officers and thirty-nine men. Its ranks were subsequently recruited, and during the summer of 1864 it was with the Army of the Potomac, sharing its fortunes, and engaged in all the battles of the Wilderness. At the Weldon railroad the regiment was captured bodily, less than twenty men escaping. Major Willson was in rebel hands for twenty months, half of which time he spent in Libby, and at last escaped from Danville, Va., making his way over three hundred and fifty miles alone to the Union lines in Tennessee. He awards to the negroes, without exception, the credit of feeding and assisting him on his long and perilous journey. His testimony on their behalf shows that the Government has no truer friends than the men and women of this oppressed and down-trodden race.

The regiment subsequently acted as provost guard at the 5th corps headquarters, and was

MILITARY ITEMS.—Capt. W. I. Clark 104th Regt. was relieved from duty yesterday to return to his regiment.

The following men belonging to a detachment of the 161st Reg't. will leave soon:—First Sergeant Esau Freeman; Quartermaster Harry Nash; Serg't D. C. Amy; Corp'l G. H. Snell; Corp'l Robert B. Murray; Privates D. A. Atwater; A. N. Brown; A. M. Harris; Sam D. Cooper; John S. Warner.

—About 53 men were sent away yesterday.

—Capt. Damars of the detachment of the 161st is still detailed here in connection with the General Court Martial. His duties have been arduous and well performed, and it would be impossible to spare him for the field, until the business before the Court has been disposed of.

—Yesterday afternoon, Companies A and B, of the 170th were duly mustered in, and left last night, for the south. They were armed with Enfield rifles. The names of the commissioned officers of Co. A are Capt. A. A. Terrell, First Lieut. H. D. Carpenter; Second Lieut. J. E. Parr; of Co. B, Capt. R. F. Stewart; First Lieut. Geo. Cook; Second Lieut. Bowker. Co. C. will be mustered today, and sent forward soon.

—Stewart is still carefully guarded. There are three privates on duty during the day around the outside of the jail, and a corporal inside, with the prisoner and a commissioned officer who commands the whole. At night the guard pass the time within the jail near the prisoner.

ONE HUNDRED AND FOURTH N. Y. INFANTRY.—
Wounded.—S. Streeter, Co. C., Corporal E. M.
Wright, Co. B., Sergeant C. Clark, Co. F., J.
DeLong, Co. K., G. W. Vanderhule, company not given.

Wounded New York Soldiers.—The following names of members of the 104th Regt., wounded in the movement on the Weldon Railroad we find in the New York Tribune of yesterday: Serg't S. Curtis, Co. B; W. Schetz, A; Corp. — Toms, A; —McMaggee, A; Serg't N. Crooft, A; D. Sellar, C, head; Corp. G. Clarke, E.

Rev. F. DeW. Ward, Chaplain of the 104th Regiment, has been discharged from the service on account of physical disability, and is now at home.

On Saturday last Major Henry V. Colt, of the 104th, left for Elmira, where he is detailed for duty. He may be there for two or three months we understand. This respite from the active duties of the field is well merited. For near two years he has been in active and daily service; and this is his first furlough from the field.
